4 Relatives Of Congress Leader Hurt In Collision

Party on Way to Funeral of House Members Husband.

Victims Reported Seriously Injured

Roosevelts Send Wreath to Decorate Grave of R. F. Norton.

Laurence Harbor, N. J., June 19 (Spl.).—Violet Norton, 34, of Union City, a niece by marriage of Representative Mary T. Norton, was killed and four other close relatives, all members of the Norton family of Weehawken, N. J., were critically injured when an automobile in which they were riding to a funeral of Mrs. Norton's husband, Robert Frank Norton, at Allenhurst, N. J., collided with a bus.

The four critically injured who were taken to the South Amboy (N. J.) Memorial Hospital, are:

Peter North, 55, of Weehawken, compound fracture of the left arm, possible fractured skull and a fractured nose.

Mr. Norton, a brother of the Representative's late husband.

The dead woman leaves a son, Robert, 9 and a daughter, Ann, 3.

Floral tributes from President and Mrs. Roosevelt and the House District of Columbia Committee, of which Mrs. Mary T. Norton is chairman, decorated the grave of her husband, who was buried in the Holy Name Cemetery, Jersey City.

Flowers and messages of condolence were also received from Democratic House Leader John T. Rainey, the New Jersey State Democratic Committee, Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. Harry Hehr, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, a former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and many other National officials.

Harriman Held Guilty of Fraud

N. Y. Banker Is Liable for 80-Year Term and $80,000 Fine.

New York, June 19 (AP).—Joseph W. Harriman, white-haired 67-year-old founder of the defunct Harriman National Bank & Trust Co., was convicted today in Federal court of misapplication of $1,713,080 of the bank's funds, of lending $300,000 on improper security and of causing false entries to be made in the accounts of 14 large depositors.

The jury deliberated only two hours, then returned its verdict, which found Harriman guilty on all 16 counts, and acquitted Albert M. Austin, former executive vice president of the bank, a codefendant.

A maximum sentence of 80 years can be imposed, plus a maximum fine of $80,000. Each of the 16 counts is punishable by a five-year prison sentence or a $5,000 fine, or both.

"Your verdict is thoroughly understandable," Judge Knox said. "There is no doubt in my mind but that Mr. Harriman is guilty on each count in the indictment.

"I think it is quite impossible that you probably could have found the defendant, Austin, guilty also. I dare say you looked at him as I did, and you determined he followed Harriman's instructions throughout in order to keep a position he wanted very much to hold."

The banker will remain at liberty on $25,000 bond until June 27, when sentence will be pronounced.

Rains Peril Storm Area in Honduras

7 Buried Alive as House Sinks Into Earth.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, June 19 (AP).—Reports tonight from the region devastated by the second hurricane to spread desolation in Honduras in two weeks stated that heavy downpours of rain continue and that the flood menace is increasing in the Goascoran River Valley.

Near Gajulquira a house sank in soil softened by rain and seven members of one family were buried alive. From the town of Agunqueterique came a report that damage to villages was heavy and that rain and wind wiped out many crops. It is believed casualties were heavy.

Municipal authorities reported that owing to heavy rains, the nearby village of Pilliguin was sinking into earth.

"Lost Bride's" Luggage Yields Murder Clew

Bloodstains on Trunk in Vienna May Undo Proderjay.

Vienna, June 19 (U.P.).—Strong indications that Miss Agnes C. Tufverson, missing New York and Detroit lawyer, was murdered, developed during the inquiry here today.

The investigation took a startling turn when the police, using a so-called "miracle lamp," reported discovery of bloodstains on the missing woman's baggage found in a house occupied by Ivan Poderjay, Yugoslavian adventurer held in connection with the mystery.

Criminology experts were ordered at once to make a chemical analysis of spots to determine whether they are human bloodstains.

The bloody baggage had been hidden in the house and both Poderjay and Suzanne Ferrand, identified as his French wife, at first denied knowledge of its contents. Their wavering stories after the woman's arrest yesterday added to the belief they know far more about the circumstances surrounding the disappearance of Miss Tufverson, after her marriage to Poderjay last December in New York, than either has admitted.

The "miracle lamp," which reveals markings and other evidence invisible to the naked eye, previously had identified the luggage as belonging to Miss Tufverson. It exposed labels bearing her name which had been nearly obliterated by scraping and scrubbing.

Poderjay and Mme. Ferrand were subjected to a continuance of the police grilling, with this new evidence to aid the authorities.

Later, however, police announced they would turn the Ferrand woman over to the prosecutor for further investigation, indicating the end of police investigation so far as she was concerned.

A break between Poderjay and

Housekeeper Held In Virginia Slaying

Warsaw, Va., June 19 (Spl.).—Charged with slaying Robert H. Barrow, 75, during a quarrel with Barrow's son at his home in Tidwells, Westmoreland County, yesterday, Mrs. Bessie Reamy, 35, housekeeper for the Barrows, is held in jail at Montrose.

The Barrows formerly lived in Washington and moved to Westmoreland County several years ago.

Mrs. Reamy is said to have told police that Walter Barrow, the son, slapped her during an argument and that in defending herself she grabbed a pistol and shot at him. She said the elder Barrow was shot accidently as he tried to take the pistol away from her.

Umpire Pulls a Boner; Stewart Triumphant; Weaver Fails.

By Shirley L. Povich, (Sports Editor of The Post).

Flaming with ambition at the prospect of nearing the coat-tails of the league leaders, the Nats spent 4½ hours battling the Cleveland Indians in a double-header yesterday, won the first game, 6 to 2, and then discovered that they had been on a treadmill all afternoon when they lost the second game, 3 to 0.

The score of that second game is but a compound adjective for the type of pitching the Nats met up with at the hands of Mel Harder, of the Indians, who put a stop to the Washington Club in general and Monte Weaver in particular. Striving for his eighth consecutive victory of the season, Weaver found instead his second defeat.

Win Under Protest.

That first game the Nats won under protest and despite the piratical umpiring of John Donnelly, the freshman umpire of the American League staff, who chose a poor day for a "boner" what with League President Will Harridge and Umpire in Chief of the League, Tom Connolly sitting in the stands.

Donnelly brutally snubbed the playing rules on one occasion to rob the Nats of a run after he himself had precipitated the situation by attempting unsuccessfully, with all the speed of a rheumatic snail, to remove himself from the path of Heinie Manush's clean hit to the right of second base in the fourth inning.

Manush's scorching grounder smacked Donnelly on the hoof and Second Baseman Hale recovered the ball in time to throw Manush out at first base. Donnelly waved Manush out with a flourish and there was no sign of a protest either by Manager Joe Cronin or Donnelly's superior, Umpire Kolls, at the plate, despite the fact that Manush was entitled to a single on the play.

Men on First, Second.

Not until he checked on the rules an inning later to discover that a

Four More Blast Victims May Die

Jamestown, N. Y., June 19 (AP).—Physicians feared tonight that four more deaths would be added to the toll of six lives lost in yesterday's gasoline tank explosion.

The condition of Zygmond Golcsynski, 16, brother of one of the six victims, became worse late in the day and he was not expected to survive. Doctors held out little hope for Harold D. Anderson 37, and Capt. Leonard Hendrickson, 47, both firemen, and Merlin C. Buck, 26, a spectator at a fire which preceded the blast.

The district attorney, coroner and city authorities began investigating the accident, but expected grave difficulty in determining its cause.

Clearing House Cuts Deposit Interest Rates

Low Yield on Loanable Funds Cited as Reason for D. C. Action.

Due to the inability of banks to invest money at higher rates of interest and to the lack of demand for commercial and collateral loans, the prevailing local rate of interest yesterday was reduced on savings and time accounts to a maximum of 2½ per cent, the Washington Clearing House Association announced.

The previous rate was 3 per cent. Clearing house officials, headed by Henry H. McKee, chairman, said that it would be the policy of the organization to adjust, from time to time, the rates of interest paid on savings and time accounts in accordance with the yield obtained on loanable funds.

The clearing house also provided that upon deposits received on and after July 1, 1934, the maximum rate of 2½ per cent may be paid only on deposits up to $5,000. On the excess between $5,000 and $10,000, the rate of 2 per cent may be paid, but above $10,000 a rate of not higher than 1½ per cent may be paid, it was stated.

This reduction still leaves the Washington rates somewhat higher on the average than those in other large nearby cities.

Shorts Shocking, Golf Rules Call For Undershirt

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—The undershirt today became the badge of respectability at the Bob o' Link Golf Club—a club and course well known over the golfing world.

Members regarded the club somewhat as a last masculine sanctuary—women are not allowed.

Today they were astounded to see posted a notice reading:

"We have received various complaints about golfers at Bob o' Link playing golf in half-nude attire. This mode of dress must be stopped at once.

(Signed.) "Board of Directors."

Complaints had been made because some players appeared in shorts only.

$60,000,000 Cuban Loans Disavowed

Probers Oppose Paying Machado Regime Debt.

Havana, June 19 (AP).—A Cuban committee investigating the legality of approximately $60,000,000 in American loans contracted during the Machado regime has advised the government against payment, it was learned tonight.

Emeterio Santovenia, secretary to the president, announced the committee's unfavorable report on servicing loans largely held by American bondholders, the Chase National Bank, the National City Bank of New York and the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago.

It was stated that the grounds for the unfavorable decision rested in the contention that loans contracted under the regime of former President Gerardo Machado are not legally binding upon the present Cuban government.

Colombia Given Town Which Threatende War

Leticia, June 19 (AP).—This jungle village which threatened to be the object of a war between Colombia and Peru was formally turned over to Colombian authorities today after one year under League of Nations administration.

The League of Nations flag was lowered and the Colombian flag hoisted at the public school building after a toast of friendship was drunk by representatives of Colombia, Peru and the league.

Women Give Blood to Fight California Infantile Paralysis

Los Angeles, June 19 (AP).—More than 500 volunteers from women's clubs and parent-teacher associations have furnished blood to provide serum to combat the infantile paralysis epidemic here, Dr. R. V. Stone, laboratory director of the Los Angeles health department, said today.

A total of 911 cases of infantile paralysis, with eight deaths, has been reported in the city and county since May 1. The number of new cases has gradually decreased, and yesterday only 35 were reported.

Fifty graduate nurses were sought today for special duty at the Los Angeles General Hospital, center of the fight against the epidemic.

Five physicians and 30 nurses, who had been handling infantile paralysis cases, have contracted the disease, it was disclosed.

Many mild, widely-scattered cases in San Francisco also were reported today by Dr. J. C. Geiger, city health officer. He said there have been 44 cases there since May 1, four deaths resulting, as contrasted to 230 cases and 27 deaths in the 1930 epidemic. Redwood City, south of San Francisco, reported eight cases and one death.

One of the victims in Hollywood is Hal Rosson, film cameraman, estranged husband of Jean Harlow, actress. Physicians said his case had passed its crisis and no permanent ill effects were expected. Miss Harlow kept in close touch with Rosson by telephone, but she could not be reached for comment on a possible reconciliation.

At San Francisco, the situation offered no cause for alarm and there were no plans to close theaters and swimming pools, Dr. Geiger said. A Boy Scout encampment at San Francisco and a Christian Endeavor meeting at Berkeley have been postponed, however.

Dr. J. D. Dunshee, State director of public health, said there were 1,903 cases in the State in 1930. Last year, 170 cases were reported. From January 1 this year to May 1, the number was 105.

Miss Perkins To Arbitrate Steel Dispute

Empowered to Represent Roosevelt in Any Peace Plans.

Union Chiefs Meet With President; Strike Threat Wanes.

The steel industry dispute, the Nation's biggest labor problem, was placed in feminine hands for settlement yesterday when President Roosevelt authorized Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, to represent him in undertaking any negotiations that appear advisable.

This action followed a conference between President Roosevelt and the executive committee of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, who, at Pittsburgh last week voted to withhold their threatened strike hoping that White House intervention might bring about an agreement with steel operators.

Previously the union leaders conferred with Miss Perkins. Apparently satisfied with her attitude, they then went to the White House, where it was decided that she should act for the President in attempting to bring the employers and workmen into agreement.

May Face New Board.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, who accompanied the delegation of steel union leaders, said that if the Pittsburgh peace plan were rejected by the employers, they would be faced with the establishment of a board under the labor disputes bill signed by the President yesterday.

The threat of a strike appeared to be receding. Green emphasized that the Amalgamated no longer is threatening a walkout.

"We don't want that now," he said. Strike fever cooled off after his earnest personal appeal to union leaders at Pittsburgh last week.

Responsibility for bringing together the militant steel workers and their equally militant employers, who are carrying on a bitter hostility which has come down for two generations and through two bloody but unsuccessful strikes, rests with the quiet little woman

Piracy Case Stirs Protest

Guarantee of Safety of Six Captives Demanded by 2 Nations.

Shanghai, June 19 (U.P.).—One of the most flagrant cases of piracy along the China coast in recent years aroused foreign powers today. Japan and Great Britain joined in protest against seizure of five Britishers and a Japanese by the Chinese bandits.

The powers dispatched warships to the scene of the piracy, north of Chefoo. U. S. naval summer base, and Japan demanded that the Chinese government guarantee their safe return.

Japan sent a cruiser from Port Arthur to Chefoo with instructions to protect Japanese lives and property in that vicinity and aid in search for the missing men.

British and United States warships already were cruising close to shore for a sign of the pirates, but it was believed they had fled inland with their victims.

The British Legation at Peiping sent the assistant military attache to Tsinanfu, capital of Shantung Province, to press demands for prompt action in the rescue.

The British note to Nanking and the Shantung province government demanded troops be dispatched.

West Va. Strikers Battle With Police

One Hurt, 30 Arrested in Textile Plant Clash.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 19 (Spl.).—One man was injured and 30 arrested when police used tear gas and night sticks today in dispersing about 100 strikers attempting to picket the Berkeley Woolen Mill plant here today.

Charles M. Brown, a dyer, suffered a broken nose and other injuries that sent him to a hospital during the clash between strikers and Martinsburg and State police. Police acted as bodyguards in escorting about 50 workers from the plant to their homes at quitting time today. A throng of more than 1,000 spectators blocked traffic near the plant.

The clash followed issuance of a second injunction last night extending the area in the plant's vicinity protected by police.

Wife Divorces Wright, D. C. Socialite, in Reno

Reno, Nev., June 19 (AP).—Mrs. Mabel Wilson Wright won a divorce from Washburne Wright, Washington and New York City socialite, at a private trial before District Judge Thomas F. Moran here today.

Details of her charge of extreme cruelty were not made public. They married October 10, 1931, in New York City.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Put On N. Y. 'Radical' List

Ickes, Wallace, Borah and Norris Are Among 1,300 "Suspects," Including Scores of Notables, Reported Under Investigation.

New York, June 19 (AP).—Thirteen hundred persons, a veritable Who's Who of the contemporary political, social, educational, artistic and literary worlds and including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, two Cabinet members and two United States Senators, are listed in a book the New York Post says is being used by the Police Department in a campaign against radicals.

The Post previously has declared the Police Department has been turned into a "secret police to harry radicals" and today asserted that the list—contained in a book titled "The Red Network—was the principal source of the criminal investigation bureau's information about a "Red Menace."

One of the persons listed was Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, who appointed Police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan, and O'Ryan, the paper says, has been instrumental in the campaign. The mayor laughed heartily today when informed of the list.

"It's not the first or last list of one kind or another I've been on," he said.

At Mrs. Roosevelt's town home it was said she had not seen the list and would not care to comment upon either the list or its significance.

The Cabinet members listed were Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace. United States Senators William E. Borah, of Idaho, and George W. Norris, of Nebraska, were named.

Among the prominent clergymen listed were Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Mgr. John A. Ryan, director of the National Catholic Welfare Council and member of the faculty at Cath-

U. S. Spending For Recovery Past 7 Billion

Estimates Vary Up to 21 Billions; "Wild Waste" Rapped by Taber.

By Robert C. Albright.

Pump-priming outlays of the Seventy-third Congress in its closing session yesterday were being variously estimated between $17,322,048,000 and $17,595,167,376, depending on political leanings or the way one likes to figure.

The broad variance was attributed to new emergency budget systems and the vast difference between funds actually appropriated and huge sums the Government potentially might have to spend under existing authorizations.

The $17,595,167,376 outside figure was based on appropriations plus estimated contingent liabilities. The official balance sheet was withheld by House Appropriations Chairman James Buchanan, pending a closer check of assets against debits.

Charges Extravagance.

But Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the Buchanan Appropriations Committee, was not slow to say his analysis has been completed, and shows the higher figure. In fact, coupling expenses authorized in both sessions of the Seventy-third Congress, Taber said they reach the amazing aggregate of $21,864,242,726.

"It is a record of extravagances and disregard of any sense of responsibility to the taxpayers of the United States, beyond my wildest dreams," announced the aggressive New Yorker, who has been hammering at Administration expenditures since January.

Thousand French Police Injure Rioting Leftists

Lyons, France, June 19 (AP).—Ten persons were injured tonight in a battle between leftists and police in which revolvers were fired and chairs were wielded by the radicals.

The battle occurred in the place Carnot when 1,000 policemen blocked the way of leftists on their way to an auditorium, where a nationalist meeting was being held.

Progressives Score Ouster Of Unionist

Nye Says Dismissal of Donovan Shows Johnson Is "Chief Chiseler."

Dismissal of John Donovan, president of the NRA workers union, from his position as an employe of the Labor Advisory Board by Administrator Hugh S. Johnson yesterday aroused the Progressive group in the Senate to discuss plans for making some kind of an organized protest.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, declared that Donovan's discharge made Johnson the Nation's "Chiseler No. 1." What Nye and his fellow Progressives propose to do was not revealed, but it is certain that if Congress had been in session yesterday Donovan's dismissal would have had a thorough airing in the Senate.

The hope existed on Capitol Hill that President Roosevelt would promptly take a hand in Donovan's dismissal and either have the union chief immediately restored to his position or, after an inquiry, demonstrate that his removal was justified.

Nye Scores NRA Chief.

"This incident," Nye commented, "reveals the Administrator of the NRA to be the Nation's Chiseler No. 1. He acted exactly as a bitter-end antiunion industrialist would act. Whenever industry wishes to cripple a spokesman for

Laura La Plante Weds London Movie Director

Paris, June 19 (AP).—Laura La Plante, American motion picture actress, encountered real romance in screen plays in which she has been acting in England. She was married today to Irving Asher, director of Warner Brothers London studio, who supervised Miss La Plante's work in England.

The five-minute marriage ceremony took place at the Ninth District City Hall in the presence of James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, and his wife, the former Betty Compton, film actress.

Chicago's Problem Child Gets Ten Years in Death of Girl, 2

Chicago, June 16 (AP).—Fourteen-year-old George Rogalski, Chicago's "problem child," who enticed Dorette Zietlow, 30 months old, into an abandoned icehouse and deserted her to die of exposure, tonight was convicted of kidnaping and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in the State Penitentiary.

George is the youngest person convicted of kidnaping here. A motion for new trial was overruled, sentence was pronounced, but a stay was granted untily June 29, during which time the court will decide what special provisions should be made for his imprisonment.

The little girl was lured away from her home on a Sunday in April, and two days later was found in the icehouse, nearly dead from cold, most of her clothing stripped from her. She died a few hours later. She was discovered when two boys told police they saw George peer into the icehouse and were told by him to "scram."

The boy admitted he took her to the icehouse, promising her a nickel. He insisted he had not harmed her and medical examination bore out his statements.

It took the jury a little more than an hour to convict George. The defense made no attempt to prevent conviction, stating it was interested mainly in efforts to see that the boy was put into a proper place.

In the trial today—a grim "children's day"—playmates told of the discovery of the child.

Dorette's 4-year-old brother, Kenneth, was lifted to the witness chair to give sworn testimony about the girl's death, but Judge Francis B. Allegretti decided he was far too young to be a witness.

Henry Koda, 11, told of climbing into the icehouse and finding the baby, still alive but weak from exposure.

Police to Withdraw All Guards on Duty at Work Sites.

Settlement Once Spurned by Union

Agreement Sets 5-Day Week and $1.25 Per Hour.

The carpenters' strike was ended yesterday, seven weeks from the day it started, with the signing of an agreement providing for $1.25 an hour and a five-day, 40-hour week. These are the same terms rejected by the union May 30.

The agreement is effective immediately. Today at 7:30 a. m., union carpenters will return to jobs in the Federal Triangle and all other projects. Police orders were issued removing special details on guard where nonunion carpenters have been employed.

The police order of last Wednesday canceling all leave except in emergency came to an end. Park police were expected to take off squads of uniformed men who have been guarding Calvert and P Street Bridges since last Thursday, when open-shop conditions were inaugurated on Federal and District building projects.

$10 Daily Wage Agreed.

According to the new contract, signed in Commissioner George E. Allen's office after four hours of discussion, the prevailing scale for union carpenters will be $10 a day.

Allen entered the strike picture, assuming the role of voluntary mediator, a few weeks after it began May 1. At 6 p. m. yesterday, just after the wage committee of both sides had signed the agreement, he announced with a smile:

Shipstead Wins Renomination

Farmer-Labor Primary Reaches High Mark; Olson Victor.

St. Paul, Minn., June 19 (AP).—An avalanche of ballots cast in Monday's primary election in Minnesota set a record for Farmer-Labor primary votes, returns indicated tonight, and resulted in renomination of Senator Henrik Shipstead and Gov. Floyd B. Olson.

Democrats apparently were piling up a vote more than double their previous high total of 105,000 in 1932, while Republican totals were a distant third.

The same number of precincts gave Representative Einar Hoidale a commanding lead over Lewis E. Lormann, St. Paul, in the Democratic race for senatorial nomination.

In the Republican primary, N. J. Holmberg, St. Paul, was maintaining a lead over Tom Davis, Minneapolis attorney, for entry into the November general election.

According to returns from 1,739 precincts, Gov. Olson will be opposed in the final election by Martin A. Nelson, of Austin (Republican), and John E. Regan, Mankato (Democrat), who also won the nomination two years ago.

Three changes resulted among nine Representatives.

The other two changes resulted when Representative Hoidale and Shoemaker entered the Senatorial contests.

Heavy Battle Raging In 3 Chaco Sectors

Buenos Aires, June 19 (AP).—A heavy battle raged tonight in three sectors on the Chaco Boreal front, said dispatches tonight from Paraguay and Bolivia.

Communiques indicated the battle threatens to assume proportions equal to the engagement in the Canada strongest sector late in May, when a long-advertised Paraguayan offensive met with a decisive setback.

Armed Bands Terrorize Havana Business District

Havana, June 19 (AP).—A large, yellow automobile sped through "Old Havana" this afternoon, its occupants firing rifles and pistols in all directions.

Police said there were no casualties. Old Havana embraces part of the business district. Earlier, a band of armed men forced a bus driver and passengers out of the vehicle in nearby Vedado and burned the bus. No arrests were made.

Miss Perkins Will Arbitrate Steel Dispute

Empowered to Act for President in Any Peace Plans.

Cabinet member, who was refused permission to address steel workers at Homestead, Pa., last summer, she has been playing a silent but increasingly important role for some time in the steel strike situation, while at the same time Gen. Johnson, after exchanging bitter remarks with union leaders, has been less in evidence.

Union Leaders Present.

The union leaders who went to the White House included, besides Green, M. F. Tighe, president of Amalgamated; Edward W. Miller and Thomas Gillis, vice presidents, and Louis Leonard, secretary-treasurer.

The labor leaders, following orders of the Pittsburgh steel workers' convention, formally requested the President to transmit their proposal for a Presidential disputes board to the industry, which Mr. Roosevelt turned over to Miss Perkins.

Leaving the conference, Green asserted:

"Miss Perkins is to present our proposal to the steel people. They are to reply, or at least consider it. Miss Perkins is to explore the situation and find out whether the industry will acept the board proposed under the bill approved today, or that proposed by the workers."

Green gave evidence he was highly satisfied with developments. Likewise, Tighe, who had opposed a strike from the first, declared:

"We were treated very nicely and cordially, and appreciate very much our interview."

White House Statement.

In a statement issued as the White House conference broke up, President Roosevelt said that he had "discussed with the Secretary of Labor every detail of the proposal that has been made by a committee of the Amalgamated Steel, Iron and Tin Workers on behalf of employes in the steel industry. The Secretary has described to me also the proposal that the employers in the steel industry made last week to the Administrator for NRA.

"It is my hope that some method will be found to adjust all the points that are in controversy and to preserve orderly relations without sacrificing any principle that is involved.

"I have referred the proposal to the Secretary of Labor for careful study and to undertake any negotiations that seem advisable. The Secretary is fully empowered to represent me in taking whatever action seems advisable under the circumstances and will, of course, consult and cooperate with all other branches of Government concerned."

Consultations and discussions followed the Secretary's negotiations with Mr. Amalgamated S. Johnson. The General, whose denunciations goaded the Tighe and Lee executives of the Amalgamated Association to fury recently, apparently was not consulted. Senator Wagner, of the National Labor, conferred with the President and Miss Perkins about the labor disputes bill. The New York Democrat did not participate in the steel conference.

Disputes Bill Signed.

Equally important to labor was President Roosevelt affixing his signature to the disputes bill. This allows him to set up a National board and regional boards to investigate issues between workers and employers arising out of the controverted section 7-a of NIRA. The President emphasized the bill would chiefly affect elections on collective bargaining.

Miss Perkins will have to reconcile the steel workers' proposal for an "impartial board" to be appointed by the President, with that brought forward by the industry. Steel employers gave President Roosevelt a plan for establishment of a board to hear disputes, and provided for eletcions, on a "majority rule" basis.

The workers oppose the latter proposition, and the employers' plan for proportional representation was foreseen as a difficulty facing Miss Perkins.

The former New York social worker declined to discuss her first negotiation steps. "I'll have to think it over," was her only comment. She appeared happy, however, over the events which pointed to an end to strike threats.

H. A. Siebrecht, 85, Noted Florist, Dies

Many Famed New Yorkers Among His Clients.

New Rochelle, N. Y., June 19 (AP).—Henry Augustus Siebrecht, 85, internationally famous landscape architect and florist, died today following a year's illness.

Siebright was known as the "Father of Fifth Avenue," his florist shop at Thirty-fifth street and Fifth avenue, New York, being the first commercial house allowed north of Twenty-third street, when the avenue was the street of the finest homes in America.

Among his clients of the 70's and 80's were J. Pierpont Morgan, whom he knew personally, John D. Rockefeller and Mrs. Russell Sage.

Court Sleeper Arrested.

Lansing, Mich. (U.P.).—William Shannon, 35, of Lansing, recently decided that a courtroom is not the exact place for slumber. Attending court recently, Shannon, in a somewhat inebriated condition, leaned over into the lap of a woman setting next to him and went to sleep. Police aroused him and arrested him.

Carpenters End D. C. Strike, Accept $10 a Day, Short Week

"I'm an ex-arbitrator now. Whew!"

Present at the successful conference was William L. Hutcheson, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. He did not sign the agreement, however. Joseph Rinis, O. C. Rickard and W. Risdon, constituting the carpenters' District council wage committee, signed for the union. C. Wohlgemuth, J. R. Skinker and Edward H. Rosengarten signed for the Master Builders Association.

Committee Accepts Terms.

Settlement was reached only after the membership of the five locals which comprise the carpenters' District council had empowered its wage committee to negotiate a final agreement.

Previous compromises, which had to go to a vote of the full body, had been turned down. One offered $1.25 for a 5-day, 40-hour week, and another called for the same hourly scale for a 4-day, 32-hour week.

Although the agreement was not signed by any of the out-of-town contractors holding large Federal contracts here, they are expected to abide by its terms, continuing as they have in the past to comply with wage scales negotiated between the Master Builders Association and carpenters.

The M. B. A. is an organization of local builders, none of whom at present has any major Government building contracts.

Text of Agreement.

Following is the agreement which goes into effect this morning:

"This agreement, entered into this nineteenth day of June, 1934, by and between the Master Builders Association and the Carpenters District Council, both of Washington, D. C., Alexandria, Va., and vicinity, witnesseth:

"1. Eight hours to constitute a day's work, on all Federal, municipal and private work, for the first five days of the week, making a total of 40 hour per week. Time to be made between hours of 7:30 a. m. and 4 p. m.

"2. The minimum rate of wage for a journeyman carpenter to be at the rate of $1.25 per hour.

"3. The parties hereto further agree that the minimum rate of pay for a foreman shall not be less than 12½ cents per hour more than that of a journeyman carpenter's wage.

"4. The wages of apprentices shall be in proportion to those granted the journeyman carpenter, i. e. $2.75 per day for the 90-day probationary period; $3.65 per day for the balance of the year or nine months following the probationary period; $5 per day for the second year; $6 per day for the third year, and $8 per day for the fourth year.

Double Time Provided.

"5. All overtime shall be double time.

"6. This agreement as to wages and hours expires April 30, 1935.

"7. All parties agree to meet three months prior to the said expiration for the purpose of readjustment or change in this contract.

"8. The Carpenters District Council further agrees to furnish the Master Builders Association with sufficient copies of the District Council's by-laws and jurisdictional claims.

"9. It is further understood this agreement will be submitted to the NRA code authorities at a public hearing for adoption as a regional agreement for this area as provided in Section 7 (b) of the NRA act, and it is further agreed that both parties to this contract will work in the direction of making this an area agreement.

"10. Carpenter work shall not be stopped on any work operated by members of the Master Builders Association for any reason whatsoever, until the grievance, if any, shall have been referred to representative committees of both sides, sitting jointly, meeting within 48 hours following complaint."

Contractors Led to Accord.

Commissioner Allen was a witness to the contract.

It was a proposal by the contractors made last Friday which led to accord. A peace conference was breaking up in failure, following rejection by the union of the Washington Building Trades Council suggestion of arbitration, when the employers announced their willingness to negotiate through fully authorized committees representing both sides.

Turned down by the union on previous occasions, the plan finally was voted favorably at a meeting of the carpenters' council Monday night.

A delegation from the building trades body visited Allen at noon yesterday, shortly before the joint conference began, and told him their organization was leaving the dispute entirely in his hands but, in event of another deadlock, would support the carpenters.

Biggs in Delegation.

In the group were Frank M. Biggs, president of the council, which represents all building trades in the Capital; John Locher, secretary, and John D. Fitzgerald, Larry Kelly and A. L. Schoenthal, business agents.

Although non-union carpenters had been employed by member contractors of the Master Builders Association since last Tuesday and by out-of-town contractors since Thursday, the trades council never carried out its threat to call a general strike of ironworkers, plumbers, electricians and other crafts in protest.

With union men returning to their jobs today, possibility of a general strike is averted. The settlement also is expected to hasten agreement in the strike of plasterers, who have been out almost six weeks demanding $1.75 an hour and a five-day, 30-hour week.

The carpenters' original demands were for $1.37½ and a 30-hour week. Since they are returning to work on the old 40-hour basis, plasterers are expected to drop or modify their 30-hour demand and confine their activity to fighting for an increase in the present $1.50 hourly scale.

Senate Finds Thayer Guilty

Vote Is Unanimous Against Former New York Legislator.

Albany, N. Y., June 19 (AP).—The New York Senate today voted that former Senator Warren T. Thayer, Republican, of Chateaugay, was guilty of misconduct in his relationship with the Associated Gas & Electric Co. from 1926 to 1932. Thayer could not be removed from office. He resigned June 11.

The vote against Thayer was unanimous.

Thayer was at his home at Chateaugay, 200 miles away, as Paul J. McCauley, counsel to the judiciary committee, summed up the inquiry into Thayer's public utility connections. No one appeared to represent the former Republican Senator.

McCauley contended it was "very significant" that Thayer sold the Chasm Power Co., at Chateaugay, to the associated system a few days after he became chairman of the public service committee in January, 1925. This committee handles all bills affecting public utilities companies.

Langer Campaigns For Renomination

Bismarck, N. Dak., June 19 (AP).—Temporarily fortified against attempts by Lieut. Gov. Ole H. Olson to take over the Governor's office, Gov. William Langer, convicted Sunday on Federal conspiracy charges, today continued his campaign for renomination at the primary eight days away.

Principal plates in his armor were an opinion of State Attorney General P. O. Sathre denying claims of Olson supporters that Langer's conviction automatically vacated the office, Sathre's refusal to institute ouster proceedings, and a guard of deputy sheriffs posted at the Governor's office.

Langer cohorts emphasized that if motions for a new trial are denied, an appeal will be taken to the United States Circuit Court. He is to be sentenced June 29.

Trial for Murder Faced by Coach

Inquest Set in Death of Female Impersonator.

Washington, Pa., June 19 (AP).—His nerves quieted by a sedative, George H. Bartholomew, husky wrestling coach and director of physical education at Washington and Jefferson College, rested tonight in the county jail after being formally charged with murder in the death of George T. Manis, 23-year-old female impersonator.

Robert E. Burnside, retained to defend Bartholomew, announced a preliminary hearing will be waived and no effort will be made to free the 49-year-old college instructor until after the inquest, tentatively set for next Monday.

Authorities insisted no new evidence has been found since Bartholomew signed a statement saying Manis died while the two were "scuffling" on the night of June 8. The 175-pound coach asserted the 110-pound youth had attempted to "blackmail him."

Precinct Casts No Vote.

Burns, Oreg. (U.P.).—No one came to vote in the Alvord precinct in the southern part of Harney County in the primary election held recently, so Mr. and Mrs. Walter Anderson, chairmen of the election board, sealed up their empty ballot box and returned it. They decided not to count their own two votes.

Calvert Street Span Open Today

Vehicular and Pedestrian Traffic to Be Permitted.

Vehicular and pedestrian traffic will be permitted today on the old Calvert Street Bridge, which was recently moved to permit construction of a new span.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, yesterday announced trucks will not be permitted to cross the bridge. Street cars were allowed to use the structure soon after it was moved.

Motor and pedestrian traffic was barred, pending the completion of the roadways at the bridge heads.

Senate Group Flays Johnson In NRA Ouster

its workers it is contended that the employe was inefficient. It is the best possible illustration why the company union should be banned.

"Gen. Johnson's attitude more and more demonstrates his thorough ineptness to square up to what the situation calls for. Heaven only knows what that man will do when President Roosevelt leaves the city.

"Anyone who studies the record of the New Jersey carpet factory of which he is president and anyone who looks at the record of his connection with the Moline Plow Co. need not be surprised at what is transpiring every day in NRA."

Babcock for Probe.

Meanwhile, E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, indicated he probably would appoint an impartial board to investigate the ouster.

Babcock declared the situation resolved itself into two questions:

"1. Was Donovan actually removed because of union activities (and in this connection it may be said that Gen. Johnson issued a denial and the lodge takes the affirmative), and

"2. If the removal was because of union activity, was the union activity such as is permissible to a Government employe presenting a union grievance?"

Johnson reiterated at a press conference that he dismissed Donovan on the recommendation of the unionist's superiors, for insubordination and inefficiency. He added he would welcome an investigation by the National Labor Board.

Asked if he customarily dismissed minor employes, Johnson said he personally discharged Donovan as "this was serious because this man was head of the union."

Protest Meeting Planned.

Johnson explained reports that other union members might be dismissed by disclosing he had "some evidence" that one unionist had disclosed to outsiders confidential Government documents. He told reporters they could rest assured the Donovan case was "not one of discrimination."

Donovan's union will hold a protest meeting tonight in the Hamilton Hotel. A circular calling the session charged:

"He was discharged, not for inefficiency, but because he led a delegation to protest delay in a case of manifest injustice to a union member.

"Insubordination also was alleged. His 'insubordination' was refusal to remove his delegation until another appointment was made, after Gen. Johnson broke an engagement to receive the committee.

"Several of Gen. Johnson's subordinates have been trying to 'get' President Donovan and break up the union ever since it was organized.

"Now they think they have succeeded. We think otherwise."

The union's grievance committee later called at the White House and requested an appointment with the President when he returns to Washington next week after a New England visit. The communication was not made public.

Meanwhile, a group of technical advisers to the Labor Advisory Board met and drafted plans to aid Donovan in his fight for reinstatement.

Storekeeper Lured From Home; Clubbed to Death

Charleston, W. Va., June 19 (Spl.).—Edmund Anders, 60, was clubbed to death last night when lured from his home by a man who said he wanted to make a purchase at the Anders country store near Beckley. His wife and sister-in-law, Mrs. Cleve Short, were wounded by pistol shots.

Police said they could find no motive for the attack. Two hundred dollars in the pockets of the dead man was undisturbed.

ber charged the Federal deficit for 1934 and 1935 would reach $18,000,000,000.

Takng quiet inventory of the costs invovled in emergency and regular annual outlays, other experts were more conservative ni their computations.

But even the more modest were willing to concede something in the neighborhood of $7,000,000,000 actually appropriated, not counting contingent liabilities incurred.

Relief Expenditures.

In this total they include not only the nine annual departmental appropriations, which range from the small $25,075,000 legislative supply measure, to the huge $819,721,000 Treasury-Postoffice buill, but such unprecedented relief measures as are involved in the $2,300,000,000 deficiency bill, the $950,000,000 provided to wind up CWA affairs, the $150,000,000 made available for cattle aid, and the $40,000,000 appropriation for seed loans.

It is not around these measures, but rather over Federal obligations incurrel by extensions in Federal a Federal guarantee behind semi-borrowing power and the placing of Government bond issues, that the partisan controversy rages on Capitol Hill.

Appropriation committee members of the Taber school charge Government liabilities involved in such measures automatically jump the aggregate of potential Federal outlays by more than $10,000,000,000 over and above money actually appropriated.

Total Obligations.

In the latter list they tabulate the following, bringing total obligations, both actual and contingent, to well over the $17,000,000,000 aggregate charged by Taber:

Extending the borrowing power of the RFC, $350,000,000.

Guaranteeing the principal of farm loan bonds, $2,000,000,000.

Guaranteeing the principal of home loan bonds, $2,000,000,000.

Provision in the housing bill for the HOLC to issue more bonds, $1,000,000,000.

Limitation placed on mortgages Government may insure, $2,000,000,000.

Treasury, RFC and Federal Reserve outlays possible under the industrial loans bill, $680,000,000.

Ultimate cost of the treaty Navy program, $500,000,000.

Restoration of Federal pay cut and veterans' benefits, $228,000,000.

State road aid authorizations, $422,000,000.

British Abandon Idea Victim Was American

London, June 19 (AP).—The aces of Great Britain's crime-detection forces gave their best efforts today to solving the mystery revealed by the finding in two railway stations of parts of a woman's body.

Sir Bernard Spilsbury, famous pathologist of the home office, who has played an important role in every major murder case of recent years, began a detailed examination of the torso found in a trunk at Brighton and the legs left in a suit case at King's Cross Station.

A theory, that the victim might have been Miss Agnes Turverson, missing American woman, was definitely abandoned.

the woman was seen when they engaged different lawyers. The woman's attorney said she is "just another victim of a clever swindler."

Police hoped the French woman, to whom Poderjay said he was married in England, would break under pressure of questioning, and open up the case which has aroused two continents.

The Vienna authorities also kept in touch with Scotland Yard in London, now investigating a mysterious torso in a trunk and a woman's legs in another parcel, and with New York police.

The green trunk found in the Poderjay residence bore an old American Express, New York City, label. It once was addressed to A. C. Tufverson, 423 W. 118th street, the apartment number apparently 25. It also had a fresh White Star Line label in the name of Poderjay, Southampton, Olympic.

New York to Request Vienna Pair's Custody

New York, June 19 (U.P.).—New York authorities moved today to gain custody of "Capt." Ivan Poderjay, European adventurer, whose bride, Agnes Tufverson, disappeared under mysterious circumstances last December.

While Vienna police were unearthing fresh evidence in the intriguing mystery, authorities here planned to ask for extradition of Poderjay and "Mme. Suzanne Ferrand," who has been living with him in Austria.

An indictment on grand larceny charges against the pair will be sought, but this charge will serve merely as a means of gaining custody of Poderjay and Mme. Ferrand, pending further investigation of Miss Tufverson's disappearance. The couple could be accused, it was said, of stealing clothing, luggage and jewelry belonging to Miss Tufverson.

Meanwhile the district attorney issued supenas for three communications companies to turn over any messages that may have been received by Poderjay when he was here in 1933. Another subpena was issued for the brokerage house of Brown Brothers & Harriman, to produce records concerning Poderjay's stock dealings. Police are anxious to learn if Poderjay obtained possession of any of Miss Tufverson's securities and sold them.

Working definitely on the theory that Miss Tufverson, a woman lawyer who had about $25,000 at the time of her disappearance, was murdered, detectives turned their attention to the incinerator in the apartment she occupied in Manhattan. She and Poderjay spent 16 days in the apartment, following their marriage at the Little Church Around the Corner, and it was from the apartment that Poderjay removed four trunks when he departed alone for Europe last December 22. Ashes taken from the incinerator are being examined by experts and the equipment is being scrutinized for possible bloodstains.

The grand larceny charge on which it is hoped New York police will gain custody of Poderjay is based on a complaint by Susan Sawtell, a shopping agent, of Atlanta, who took Miss Tufverson on an extensive shopping tour last December 16. Miss Sawtell said she never was paid.

Keynote Due In Fletcher Speech July 7

By Raymond Clapper.

The new chairman of the Republican National committee, Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, said yesterday he would make his first speech as party chairman at Jackson, Mich., July 7, commemorating the eightieth anniversary of the founding of the Republican party.

This speech, which will be the first important Republican event following the ending of the New Deal Congress, is expected to keynote the theme of the opposition party in the Congressional campaign now under way.

Meantime, Charman Fletcher is devoting himself primarily to organization work and he expects shortly to start traveling through the country to meet political workers and help them get set.

Silent Organizer.

After two weeks in his new shoes Mr. Fletcher shows every sign of developing as a comparatively silent organizer rather than a front man for the party. It looks as if candidates would have to shoot their own fireworks this summer.

"I am not interested in starting a ballyhoo campaign nor in posing as a party pundit," Mr. Fletcher said as he sat in his Barr Building office, working in his shirtsleeves yesterday. "I am going to make a few speeches of course and in those I will preach Republican gospel. There will be an attack along a wide front. The Republican National organization is interested in helping everyone who is nominated by Republican voters as a party candidate. While I am going to be concerned with fighting the things that we believe to be contrary to the best interests of the country, it is not for the national committee to pass upon the fitness of candidates who have been approved and nominated by their constituents."

This explanation was in reference to inquiry as to what the National party organization's attitude would be toward Republicans who have voted for parts of the Administration emergency program. The National committee will conduct a broad campaign of opposition, leaving it to individual candidates to reconcile that position with their own records in Congress. This situation has presented one of the most difficult problems with which the Republicans have had to deal. Chairman Fletcher is interested in promoting party success generally.

Others Stress Purity Test.

However, there is a disposition in other quarters within the Republican organization to concentrate help on candidates who stand for straight-out opposition to the Administration, and let the others shift for themselves. In advancing money for speakers and organization work, there is strong sentiment within the party for using this on Republicans who can pass the purity test rather than those whose voting records in the last Congress are scarcely distinguishable from those of Democratic members.

It is apparent that Mr. Fletcher is not inclined to carry any such idea to an extreme degree in his campaign, inasmuch as his first political speech will be made in Michigan, where Senator Arthur Vandenberg, a Republican who has evidenced some Administration sympathies during the last Congress, is up for reelection. In a Lincoln Day address last winter Vandenberg urged Republicans to subordinate politics to cooperation with the Administration for recovery.

Mr. Fletcher is working in close association with the joint Congressional campaign committee headed by the co-chairmen, Senator Daniel O. Hastings and Representative Chester O. Bolton. Money will be collected through the National committee treasurer and will be disbursed through him. Mr. Fletcher is undertaking to start out on a pay as you go basis, without incurring another deficit like the $200,000 one which members of the National committee pledged themselves at Chicago recently to pay off.

With the adjournment of Congress, numerous Republican Senators and Representatives were besieging Mr. Fletcher yesterday to send out help to them in the campaign now beginning. Among the callers were Senator Vandenberg, who discussed arrangements for the Jackson birthday meeting, and Senator Fess, of Ohio, who is facing a hard fight for reelection.

Woman, 7 Men In Rome Court On Spy Charge

Inventor and Army Officer Among Those Accused of Aiding Soviet.

Rome, June 19 (AP).—Seven men and one woman went on trial before the special defense of the State tribunal today, accused of selling secret military information to Soviet Russia.

Although death sentences probably will not be demanded, public interest is intense because of the prominence of some defendants.

Chief among them is Umberto Bianchi, inventor and former member of Parliament. He is held as the leader of the band, which is said to have operated for eight years.

Three air service officers are among his alleged accomplices. They are said to have used their positions to gain access to information. Capt. Ambrogi Torello faces the most serious charge. He is listed as Bianchi's chief aid.

The woman is Bianchi's 20-year-old daughter, Bianchina. The prosecution charges she acted as a go-between and delivered information to Russian agents here.

Bianchi's chauffeur and one Russian, whose name has not been made public, are two other defendants.

The inventor once represented the Socialist party in the Chamber of Deputies. He has invented a rotating sail and several electrial appliances.

Bruno Cassinelli, also a former Socialist representative and one of Italy's foremost criminal lawyers, is defending him.

Mussolini's secret Ovra police uncovered the alleged operations of the band and seized over 600 secret documents in a series of raids and arrests that began last June.

Warrant Officer Ugo Travaglia, an employe of the navy ministry, was executed by a firing squad last May after being sentenced by the tribunal for a similar offense.

First Lady's Plea to Feed Pupils Fails

But Plan for Summer Education Program Is Accepted.

The suggestion of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt that the free lunch program for school children be continued during the summer months was rejected yesterday by the Work Planning Committee of the District Emergency Works Administration.

Although the First Lady's recommendation on the lunch program was spurned, the committee acceded to her requests that the adult education and the nursery school programs be extended through the summer.

As a result of the committee action, school lunches will be discontinued today. Funds are available to pay for the adult education and nursery school programs until July 1. Additional money will be sought in the request for the July grant from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Reasons for Refusal.

The reason for not accepting Mrs. Roosevelt's request for continuance of the lunch program, committee members said, were that there are no supervisory forces at the school in the summer, that it would be inadvisable to require children to walk to school for only a lunch, that there are no available traffic policemen to protect them at crossings in the summer, and because there are items in the family relief budgets for providing food for children.

School lunches, according to Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, have been costing about $15,000 a month, while the adult education and nursery school program have cost approximately $7,600 a month. Relief costs for July are expected to drop because of the abandonment of the lunch provision.

Commissioner George E. Allen announced several weeks ago, after a conference with FERA officials, that school lunches would not be furnished during the summer months. Last week Mrs. Roosevelt sent a personal letter to Street suggesting that the three-program be continued.

"I feel very strongly," she said, "that the nursery schools and the adult education should be carried on during the summer months. I feel also that the school lunches, which are scheduled to stop when school closes, should be carried on."

Street Sees Mrs. Doyle.

Acting on the suggestion of Mrs. Roosevelt, Street discussed the programs with Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, a member of the Board of Education. Street declined to reveal Mrs. Doyle's ideas, but recommended to the committee that the lunch program be abandoned.

In urging that lunches be provided, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "Children will be just as hungry whether they are going to school or playing on the street, and if we give them lunches during school times, we certainly should give them lunches during vacation."

Capt. Howard F. Clark, director of the District EWA, said there had been no curtailment in family relief budgets in cases where children were receiving food in school. Actually, he said, double allotments for food for these children had been made.

$200,000,000 Highway Fund Allotted States

State apportionments of the $200,000,000 fund provided in the new highway construction act passed by Congress were announced yesterday by Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture.

The District of Columbia's share is $973,842. Amounts allotted States in this area are: Maryland, $1,810,058; Virginia, $3,765,387; West Virginia, $2,280,335.

Authors included Sherwood Anderson, Floyd Dell, Havelock Ellis, Norman Hapgood, Fannie Hurst, Will Irwin, Sinclair Lewis, Bruce Bliven, W. E. Woodward and H. L. Mencken, while others prominent in the arts were Lee Simonson, Lorado Taft, Leopold Stokowski, Eva Le Gallienne, Edna St. Vincent Millay and Margaret Bourke-White.

Written by Woman.

The author of the book, which The Post charges is the mainstay of the police campaign "to draw a red herring across the problem of unemployment relief," is Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, of Kenilworth, Ill.

Mrs. Dilling at her home said that if the New York Police Department were using her book to hunt down "radicals" it is using "a bullet-proof list."

"I worked 14 months, sitting on three pillows, doing the research," she said.

Other persons listed by Mrs. Dilling are:

"Suspects" Pleased.

Bruce Bliven, editor of the New Republic, Liberal magazine: "I've been trying for years to get in this company."

W. E. Woodward, author: "Glad to be elected to Mrs. Dilling's executive club."

Morris Ernst, attorney: "I understand there's a movement afoot to sue the author for libel. The plaintiffs? All those amiable people left off the black list."

The Post says Mrs. Dilling clipped newspapers, collected all sorts of pamphlets and "confidential bulletins" and finally compiled "The Red Network."

The paper said Mrs. Dilling was a "sincere and pleasant woman, animated by a desire to do good." She said she was pleasantly surprised at the effect of her book in New York, where, The Post says it was "eagerly seized upon by reactionary Wall Street elements."

Mrs. Roosevelt is described in the book as a "Socialist sympathizer and associate; pacifist; coworker with many radicals, some of whom have been appointed to Government positions by her husband."

Music, Ballet On Program

Second Event in Summer Festival Scheduled for Tonight.

Two acts of Kalman's tuneful Viennese operetta, "Die Csardas Fuerstin" ("The Dancing Princess"), and a program of ballet divertissements by students of the Bekefi-Deleporte Institute of Dance, will be presented this evening at 8:15 in the Sylvan Theater, at the Washington Monument, as the second event in the summer festival series sponsored by the Community Center Department and the National Capital Parks Office.

The operetta will be given by the Zalipsky Opera Club, directed by Mme. Marie Zalipsky, with Theodore Bekefi as stage and ballet director. The soprano and tenor leading roles will be sung by Marjorie Isaacs King and Eugene Swygert, and the cast will include Sylvia Shappiro, Helen Kierman Vasa, Donald Helm and John Kiernan. Harold Snyder is in charge of the lighting effects.

Lila Zalipsky and Ludmilla Plavsky will dance the csardas, from which the operetta takes its name. Other feature dances will be offered in the ballet portion of the program by Tanya Gnuchev, guest dancer, and Charlene Springsguth, of this city. Mme. Zalipsky will accompany the operetta. Accompanists for the dances will be Gertrude Breeskin and Nan Doe.

In the event of inclement weather, the festival program will be postponed to Thursday evening.

Dill's Seat Sought By Olympia Banker

Olympia, Wash., June 19 (AP).—Reno Odlin, 37, Olympia banker and former State commander of the American Legion, announced his candidacy today for the Republican nomination for the seat in the U. S. Senate now held by C. C. Dill, Democrat.

"I believe in the personal liberty of every citizen and the protection of property rights," he declared. "I am unalterably opposed to the alphabetical form of government by bureaus, which is rapidly destroying the business and industry of this country and crushing the individual initiative of its people."

Airlines File Appeal Notice

Four Major Groups Protest District Supreme Court Suit Dismissal.

Four major airlines, whose contracts for carrying air mail were canceled by Postmaster General James A. Farley, yesterday filed in the District Supreme Court formal notice they intended to take an appeal from a recent ruling of the District Supreme Court dismissing their suits for reinstatement of their contracts.

Through William J. Donovan, former Assistant Attorney General, the companies asked Farley to "show cause why the decree rendered against the said appellants should not be corrected and why speedy justice should not be done to the parties in that behalf."

The Pacific Air Transport, Boeing Air Transport, National Air Transport, and the Varney Air Lines were those that fought Farley's order in the District court. Their contracts were canceled February 9.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue ruled two weeks ago Farley was acting within his Governmental powers when he canceled the contracts. Further, he said, the suits which asked the contracts be reinstated were, in law, suits against the Government. That type of suit, he said, could not be maintained without the Government's consent, and that was lacking.

ALL GASOLINES ALIKE?
DON'T BELIEVE IT!

Some people believe there is no difference in gasolines. To disprove this idea, once and for all, Gulf made a series of 12 power tests on famous hills, in which 33 different gasolines competed.

WHAT furnishes the toughest test for the power of any gasoline? A hill!

This is why Gulf picked 12 famous American hills as locations for its power tests. On each of these hills, leading brands of gasoline, bought from local service stations, competed to see which could propel a car and heavy load farthest up hill in high gear before the motor stalled.

Here is presented the evidence gathered from these tests—certified by a notary public—evidence which proves, beyond question, that there is a real difference in gasolines.

GOAT SPECIAL—A Chevrolet pulls 16 bewildered goats up Lookout Mt., Tenn., in another gasoline power test.

PISGAH MT., N. C.—On the road which winds up this majestic mountain, 8 gasolines competed to see which could take a Ford sedan and 4,000-lb. load farthest up hill. Gulf won!

Fall of Hitler Rule Forecast By Rothschild

Downfall of the Hitler regime in Germany was predicted yesterday by Baron Maurice de Rothschild, descendant of the famous family of European bankers, and a member of the French Senate.

His sharply worded forecast was made in a statement to a delegation of House members who greeted him at the Capitol. Rothschild was handed an invitation to attend the Jewish People's Day at the Chicago World Fair, July 29.

"The mark is falling," he said. "Their gold reserves are constantly being reduced, and will soon dwindle to nothing. I do not say it will be tomorrow, but some day the Hitler regime will fall."

Includes Two Nazi Probers.

The Congressional delegation that waited on Rothschild included two members of the special House committee, headed by Representative John W. McCormack, investigating Nazi propaganda activities in this country.

Later McCormack called his committee together to map its work for the summer. A hearing was called for July 9 in New York. A subcommittee headed by Representatives Samuel Dickstein, of New York, and Charles Kramer, of California (Democrats), was named to take testimony in Los Angeles August 11.

Both Dickstein and Kramer were in the Congressional group that heard Rothschild's statement. Others were Representatives Celler and Peyser, New York; Sabath, Illinois; Kopplemann, Connecticut (Democrats), and Kahn (Republican), California.

"I do not believe that there will be in Germany a strong inflation like there has been in the last few years," Baron de Rothschild continued.

Cites Boycotts.

"But what I do believe is that they will not have any purchasing power abroad; that they will not be able to buy as much raw material, and that this will mean a really strong depression in Germany."

He said the Hitler regime will not fall if other countries "don't continue to remain as cold toward Germany as they have been in the last months." He said the "boycott" being observed here and abroad is contributing toward the Swastika's overthrow.

The heavy-set, massive-browed French financier who a week ago was extended the courtesy of the Senate floor, spoke rapidly, after the manner of his countrymen.

"I would not be surprised at all if some lieutenant of Hitler's who arrived here a day or two ago and who is supposed to have come here to attend his class reunion goes about the country spreading the gospel of Nazism to induce this country to accept their ideas, and even actually try to unite here non-Jewish Germans to link the United States with Hitler in their Fatherland," the French Senator told House members, obviously referring to Dr. Ernst Hanfstaengle, now visiting in this country.

Movements to Be Watched.

"I have witnessed the way they behaved in Rumania. I was there last year. I was informed there that the emissaries of Hitler were trying to organize a movement which instead of being a party of colored or silver shirts, was a party calling themselves the "Iron Crowns," who were distinctly involved in Hitler's ideas, and had for their main purpose the creation of feeling against the Jews of Rumania.

"The man who spoke to me in that way was Mr. Duca, former minister of foreign affairs, who had been friendly toward the Jews. And I remember at the end of this conversation that he told me he would not be astonished if owing to Hitler influence he would some day be assassinated. A short time after Mr. Duca was prime minister he was on his way one day to visit the King of Rumania. I was informed that he had been shot in the heart by Rumanian Nazis and died."

Dickstein, vice chairman of the McCormack Nazi investigating committee, said the movements of Hafstaengle in this country will be watched.

325 Sterilized, 147 Voluntarily, By Berlin's "Eugenics" Court

Majority Were Men and in 23 Cases No Order Was Issued.

Berlin, June 19 (AP).—Three hundred and twenty-five of Berlin's 4,250,000 residents have been sterilized "for the benefit of coming generations," the "eugenics" court revealed today in its first report.

Of these, 143 voluntarily submitted to the vasectomy operation which makes it impossible for them to become parents.

A total of 348 persons were examined by the court, and in 23 cases no order was issued. The report did not divide the persons operated on as to sex, but stated the majority were men.

The eugenics court deals with sterillization cases involving the prevention of children in families of persons regarded defective.

The criminal court penalty of sterilization against habitual sex-offenders involves complete desenualization as distiguished from the method used by the eugenics court.

The report showed 138 of the persons sterilized were recommended for treatment by hospitals and sanitariums, 38 by physicians a ' six by guardians and other nonmedical persons.

Thirteen were under 20 years old; 250 were between 20 and 40; 51 between 40 and 50, and 11 over 50.

Miss Backus Up For Promotion

Slated to Head New D. C. Character Teaching in Schools.

Miss Bertie Backus, principal of the Deal Junior High School, will be appointed assistant superintendent of schools in charge of character education after President Roosevelt approves the filling of the position, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, announced yesterday.

The position was created under an appropriation from Congress providing for introduction of character education in District schools next year. An institute to prepare personnel for the work will begin here June 25.

Inauguration of character education in Washington schools was recommended by Senator Royal S. Copeland as a model for the rest of the country. Senator Copeland made his recommendation after heading a crime investigating committee.

William A. Clark, Jr., Honored by Orchestra

Los Angeles, June 19 (AP).—William A. Clark, jr., multimillionaire Montana industrialist and patron of the arts, went to his final rest in Hollywood Cemetery today after a touching tribute from the great musical organization he founded, the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra.

The wood and string sections of the orchestra attended the funeral service in St. John's Episcopal Church and played selections from Clark's favorites, including the allegretto from Beethoven's Seventh Symphony and the Andante Cantabile from Tschaikowsky's string quartette.

Prisoners Club Sheriff And Take His Auto

Holdenville, Okla., June 19 (AP).—Two men in custody of Sheriff Alvin Self knocked him on the head, tied him to a tree and left him unconscious atop a mountain near here today.

The sheriff was bringing the men to the county jail to question them about a stolen car. After slugging the officer, the suspects took his car but fled afoot when the automobile stalled in a ditch. Bloodhounds were put on the trail of the outlaws.

14 Lose Posts In Utilities Cut

Commission Budget Cut $38,700 by Congress; 10 Employes Saved.

Notifications of dismissal were given yesterday to 14 employes of the Public Utilities Commission, because of a reduction by Congress of $38,700 in the commission's salary budget.

The dismissals are effective beginning July 1. Commissioner Riley E. Elgen has been successful in placing 10 of the employes in positions in other branches of the government.

Curtailment of the personnel, Commissioner Elgen said, will considerably hamper the work of the commission in checking company accounts and in its general engineering studies. Inspections of gas and electric meters will be diminished, because of the necessity of dismissing two of the gas inspectors and the electrical inspector.

Drive to Purge Nazi Regime of Radicals Begun

Von Papen's Speech First Step in Movement; Cabinet Split.

Berlin, June 19 (U.P.).—A far-reaching campaign to purge the Nazi rule in Germany of the more radical elements was believed underway today.

Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen's speech Sunday night at Marburg criticizing the harsher Nazi methods was the opening gun in this bold campaign which threatens to cause the first open split in the Hitlerite regime, it was stated.

Tension among cabinet members taking sides over the vice chancellor's criticism resulted in the personal intervention of Chancellor Adolf Hitler, it was understood.

Well-informed persons made no effort to conceal their belief the speech was a trial balloon in a drive by the less radical Nazi leadership to alter some phases of the government's policies.

The tension developed when the minister of propaganda, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, banned Von Papen's speech on the radio and from press publication. Von Papen was incensed, and Hitler stepped in to make peace.

Meanwhile, Von Papen was understood to have received congratulatory telegrams for his outspoken speech from President Paul Von Hindenburg and powerful industrialist friends.

Hitler, himself, was understood not to have disagreed with the contents of Von Papen's address, but simultaneously approved of Dr. Goebbels' action against its dissemination generally throughout the Reich. It was against just such censorships and suppression of facts that Von Papen's remarks were addressed, the vice chancellor declaring the government should be strong enough to permit the truth to be known and to stand just criticism from the people.

A spokesman at the propaganda ministry said Von Papen's speech might be well attuned to university audiences, to whom it was actually delivered, but that it was not attuned to the mentality of the masses to whom it might give "a false impression of what the Nazis are trying to achieve in their campaign against critics and grumblers."

Million Russians Hail Rescuers and Arctic Explorers

Moscow, June 19 (AP).—Members of the crew of the icebreaker Cheliuskin and the seven aviators who rescued them from death on an ice floe in the Bering Straits returned to Moscow today amid the thunderous acclaim of 1,000,000 cheering Russians, headed by Joseph Stalin and all high government officials.

The stirring saga of the Arctic heroes, who left Russia last August to master a Northern sea route but came to grief when their vessel was crushed by an ice floe February 13, ended in Red Square, where a huge parade was staged.

Stalin, followed by Minister of War Klementi Voroshiloff, President Michael Kalinin and scores of other prominent officials, headed the long procession of soldiers, sailors and workers.

The parade passed the forum where the airmen and 101 men, women and children who formed the Cheliuskin expedition stood garbed in the same clothes they wore when taken off the ice floe.

Minneapolis Host To Shrine Nobles

Washington to Enter Bid for 1935 Convention.

Minneapolis, June 19 (AP).—The splendor of the Far East passed in review before thousands from the flat plains of middle America today.

It was Shrinedom's parade that flowed in a stream of everchanging color through the heart of Minneapolis on the opening day of the sixtieth annual convention of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Heading the parade was John N. Sebrell imperial potentate, of Norfolk, Va.

Five men seek the position of imperial outer guard—Morley Mackenzie, of Toronto, Canada; William Woodfield, San Francisco; Alfred Arvold, Fargo, N. Dak; Julius U. Neil, Milwaukee, and Dr. T. T. Whitcomb, Omaha. It usually leads to the office of imperial potentate 11 years later. Los Angeles and Washington have entered bids for the 1935 convention.

Frazier Hopes Farm Debt Bill Becomes Law

President Refers Measure to Justice Department for Investigation.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, said yesterday he was "hopeful" President Roosevelt would sign the bill which would enable a farmer to obtain a five-year moratorium on his mortgage indeotedness if unable to reach an arrangement with creditors.

During the debate on the proposal, both in the House and Senate, opponents of the bill charged it was unconstitutional. The President yesterday referred the measure to the Department of Justice for study.

Friends of the bill said during the controversy that it went further, perhaps, than any bankruptcy legislation yet passed but that it was along the lines of relief given the railroads, municipalities and corporations.

Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, described it as a middle course between outright repudiation and uncontrolled inflation. He said it was evident existing indebtedness could not be paid unless it were drastically scaled down.

The bill was not on the Administration's calendar but Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, and others delayed adjournment until they were assured a vote on it would be permitted.

In its final form, the measure is almost identical with the bill introduced in the House of Representative McKeown (Democrat), Oklahoma.

Extra Session To Raise Road Fund Unlikely

Peery and Shirley Declare 1935 Problem Is Too Remote.

Richmond, June 19 (AP).—Capitol Hill gossipers today had an extra highway General Assembly on the way, but Gov. Peery and State Highway Commissioner Shirley branded an interim session as a last resort means of finding money to match Federal aid road money in 1935.

The discussion started when Commissioner Shirley was notified officially of the signing of the Hayden-Cartwright bill by the President.

The announcement came just as the highway commission made public its allocation of more than $6,000,000 to the units of the State's secondary system, and since these funds are eliminated from use on the primary system, particularly Federal aid roads, the situation was made more acute.

State to Receive $3,000,000.

Virginia will receive this year approximately $3,000,000 from Congress' deficiency bill, which does not have to be matched, but whatever Federal aid money is forthcoming on and after July 1, 1935, will have to be matched dollar for dollar, and probably more when right-of-way purchases are added. The Old Dominion's share of the Federal money in 1935 and 1936 is approximately $2,000,000 a year.

To meet this situation, Virginia is handicapped with a highway deficit, which, it is estimated, will reach $2,500,000 during the coming fiscal year. This was brought about mainly by the 40 per cent reduction in the price of passenger automobile licenses, which was retroactive by three months, so far as highway commission money was concerned, because it was passed by the 1934 General Assembly as an emergency measure, effective in April of this year.

"Certainly the policy of the highway commission will be to call for our share of the money in 1935, if we possibly can get the matching money," said Commissioner Shirley.

Special Session Scouted.

He scouted the idea of a special session, which primarily was an unofficial source of conversation around the capitol, and said he preferred the commission to work on a deficit rather than call the Assembly back.

"A deficit was not an uncommon thing for the highway commission some years back," the commissioner said, adding that it may be "the picture will not be so black when July 1, 1935, rolls around."

He said also there will not be another reduction in the commission's revenue next year, explaining that the automobile license reduction is falling heavily on this year's funds because of its retroactive effort.

"Reasons for calling an extra session of the General Assembly will have to be strong and compelling," said Gov. Peery. He added that it was too early to foretell what steps would be advisable.

The secondary system allocations announced today totaled $6,180,000, including $180,000 for convict labor, but the total was reduced to $6,138,881.53 by credits and debits to counties which paid.

Charlottesville, Va., June 19 (Spl.).—The Veterans of Foreign Wars, in their concluding business session this afternoon, accepted the invitation of Wilkins-Edwards Post, No. 176, to hold next year's encampment at Newport News. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

For Bonus Payment.

The new commander has been assistant professor of military science at Virginia Military Institute since 1922, but is now ordered to duty in the adjutant general's department in Chicago. In recognition of his service in that organization he was awarded a fellowship degree in Detroit.

The department reaffirmed its declaration, calling upon Congress to provide for the immediate cash payment of the World War adjusted compensation certificates, and condemned the so-called "pauper clause" governing the admission of disabled war veterans to Government hospitals when in need of hospitalization.

All posts in the department were instructed to volunteer and offer to take over the activities and duties of all camps of United Confederate Veterans in their respective communities, and to maintain and preserve their records, trophies, flags and other property, when such camps are no longer physically able to function.

A resolution was adopted deploring the indifference of the public toward the Nation's patriotic holidays and its widespread failure to display the American flag upon such occasions.

Man in Baltimore Sets Record With 4 Hearings in Day

Baltimore, June 19 (Spl.).—Four police court hearings in the same day established a record today for Edward Coburn, 39, arrested at St. Mary's City last week.

Brought to Baltimore, he was held two days while police investigated.

Today he made the rounds of police stations in a patrol auto. First he was arraigned at the western police station on four charges of misrepresentation, and at the southwestern and northwestern stations on one charge each. In the afternoon he faced a magistrate in northeastern police station on charges of nonsupport of his wife. He was arrested by Detectives Porter, Dunn and Murphy, the pickpocket squad of the Baltimore Police Department, assigned to the tercentenary celebration. He is being held for grand jury action.

Former service men are to be given preference in employment and union labor is to be employed where possible, with provision also being made for the employment of "fair" labor.

40-Mile Storm Wreaks Havoc On Chesapeake

Boats TornFrom Moorings, Dry Dock and Piers Are Wrecked.

Baltimore, June 19 (Spl.).—Torrential rains, a tide 3 feet higher than normal, and a 40-mile gale on the Chesapeake Bay last night marked the worst storm that Maryland has experienced since the devastating hurricane of August, 1933.

Today owners of boats and homes along the bay and its tributaries were surveying the damage, expected to reach thousands of dollars.

Many small boats were torn from moorings by the gale and sunk or beaten to pieces. A dry dock 200 feet long was torn away from the shore in Baltimore Harbor and jammed into a mud bank 50 feet distant.

Occupants of a dozen houses in the Bear Creek Neck section of Baltimore County prepared to flee when the water crept up to the front doors of their homes. Only one family, however, was forced to leave. The father, mother and six children were cared for by firemen at Dundalk.

In Baltimore the tide rose over the pier levels and overflowed streets near the docks. Street car traffic was rerouted during the flood.

Gibson Island, exclusive summer colony at the mouth of the Magothy River, was hard hit. The causeway connecting it with the mainland was swept away in several places, and for a time the island was isolated. A 40-foot section of the pier at Gibson Island was ripped away, and many other piers along the Severn and Magothy Rivers wrecked.

Death Faces Boy In Swim Accident

Virginia Youth Suffers Crushed Spinal Cord.

Harrisonburg, Va., June 19 (Spl.).—Whitney Mason, 21, who suffered a crushed spine when he dived into shallow water at Davis Beach, near Richmond, two weeks ago, was brought to Rockingham Memorial Hospital last night from Richmond Memorial Hospital.

Richmond specialists informed James L. Mason, of Sangerville, father of the youth, that he can not live and his death is merely a question of time. The physicians said young Mason has lived longer than most patients with a crushed spinal column.

Young Mason, on an outing with a party of Harrisonburg youths, visited Davis beach. He dived off a pier and landed on his head in shallow water, the tide being out at that time.

Young Democrats Meet in Richmond

Leesburg, Va., June 19 (Spl.).—John Galleher, Commonwealth's Attorney for Loudoun County and president of the Young Democratic Clubs of Virginia, has called a meeting of the executive committee to be held at the John Marshall Hotel, Richmond, June 23, at 2 p. m.

The purpose of the meeting is to fix the time and place of the young Democratic convention, which will be held this summer.

Benefit Party Planned.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., June 19 (Spl.).—The Guild of the Trinity Episcopal Church here will hold a benefit card party on the lawn at Leeland, the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Lee Goldsborough, Friday, from 2 to 5 p. m.

Hill Sued for Taxes on Estate, Scene of Famous Cider Test

Baltimore, June 19 (Spl.).—Franklin Farms, the estate of former Representative John Philip Hill, was involved in litigation in superior court today.

Col. Hill was sued by the Safe Deposit & Trust Co. for $10,000 on the claim he owed the firm back rent and also failed to pay city taxes on the property, in accordance with an agreement executed at the same time as the lease.

Vigorous denial of the tax claim previously had been voiced by Hill, who declares the city owes him for legal services more than the amount of the taxes claimed. The taxes are in arrears for three years, the city claims.

During the prohibition era, Franklin Farms became famous as the scene of Hill's historic cider-making test. From a tree on the "farm" Hill harvested a few apples and proceeded to make cider from them. He notified the Federal authorities here of every stage in the manufacture of the beverage and defied them to arrest him on charges of violating the prohibition laws.

He claimed that since a Government ruling allowed farmers to make wine for their own use, he was to be allowed to make cider for his own use, even thought it exceeded the legal alcoholic content. Finally he was arrested and charged with dry law violation, but won his case in a celebrated trial in Federal court, which set the precedent for many similar rulings.

G. O. P. Wants Goldsborough In State Race

State Party Backs Him as Compromise Candidate for Governor.

Baltimore, June 19 (Spl.).—Maryland Republicans are "moving heaven and earth" to have Senator Philips Lee Goldsborough become the Republican "compromise candidate" for Governor of the State, it was learned authoritatively today.

The proposed ticket would include John Philip Hill as candidate for the United States Senate, according to the report, and would be set forth with the understanding that the other party candidates withdraw.

Harry Nice, of Baltimore, Republican candidate for Governor, has pledged himself to stay in the race. It is also expected that the other three candidates, H. Webster Smith, of Baltimore; Mayor Walter Quenstedt, of Annapolis, and Harry Phoebus, of Princess Anne, would be equally adverse to the suggestion that they retire.

Goldsborough, party leaders say, would be the only candidate upon whom all Republicans would agree. Hill, also, would be a big drawing card for Baltimore City votes.

The Republican party is allegedly divided into two main camps within the State. Those opposing the Goldsboroughs move are strongly in favor of Nice as Governor and are reported to be strong enough to offer a serious threat to all-comers in the September primaries.

Thieves Make Haul At St. Mary's City Tercentenary Rite

Leonardtown, Md., June 19 (Spl.).—Thieves eluded the watchful eyes of the State police and other guardians of the public weal stationed at St. Mary's City on Saturday and Sunday and made off with valuable equipment of the newspapermen who were located in press headquarters at St. Mary's Female Seminary at St. Mary's City.

Cameras and typewriters valued at a total of $500 were stolen. Also a sum of money between $15 and $20, taken in from the sale of post cards of the seminary and surrounding historic spots, was stolen while the guests sat on the front porch viewing the scenery.

Decorations valued at $500 belonging to a decorating company were stripped from stage and buildings by souvenir hunters. Pageant Indians, seeking relief from the terrific heat by taking a swim found their clothes gone when they returned to the bank and had to resort to the original loin cloth.

In Governor's Race

Interest Grows In Maryland Governor Race

Teamwork of Radcliffe, O'Conor Seen as Significant.

Baltimore, June 19 (Spl.).—For the second time since George L. Radcliffe entered the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, he and State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor will speak from the same platform next Tuesday night, it was announced today.

Whether there is any political significance in this could not be learned. It is well known that Mr. Radcliffe would like to have Mr. O'Conor run for Attorney General on his ticket, and the fact that they have already spoken at the same political meeting, and plan to do so again, gives some basis for the belief that they may be planning to effect a merger of political fortunes.

It was pointed out today, however, that both had accepted the invitation to speak prior to Mr. Radcliffe's entry into the gubernatorial race and that there may be little political significance in their appearing together.

They will speak Tuesday at the annual carnival of St. Ambrose's Catholic Church. Many other prominent political figures of the State will speak at this affair before and after the Radcliffe-O'Conor appearance. Gov. Ritchie will speak Monday night, Mayor Jackson will follow on Thursday night, and Harry W. Nice, Republican gubernatorial aspirant, will speak June 27.

Last night Mr. Radcliffe and Mr. O'Conor spoke before the Susquehanna Democratic Club, at Elkton, to a crowd of 350 persons, who braved a storm to hear the candidate and the State's attorney.

Thursday night Gov. Ritchie will be the guest of honor and speak at a dinner arranged by a group of his admirers at the Belvidere Hotel. Guests will be limited to 500. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commander of the Third Army Corps Area, will be toastmaster and the speakers will include Capt. William H. Slayton, pioneer wet crusader and former president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

City Law Penalizes Drunken Driving

Lack of State Statute Fails to Aid Two Men.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 19 (Spl.).—Two men were fined $100 and costs in Police Court here yesterday on charges of driving while drunk.

Associate Justice Lemuel W. Houston, in passing the sentence, took cognizance of the ruling of Judge Frederick W. Coleman in Corporation Court that there is no State law controlling drunken driving, but he contended the city ordinance covering such offenses is valid.

Edward Carneal, 34, of Fredericksburg, and E. H. Holloway, 19, of Woodford, were convicted. L. L. Groves, of Stafford, was freed.

Virginia Alcohol Suspects Go Free

Norfolk, Va., June 19 (AP).—Six alleged violators of Virginia's new alcoholic beverage control act, convicted in police court, were tried on their appeals in Norfolk's two corporation courts yesterday. All were acquitted.

Judge James U. Goode, Corporation Court No. 2, instructed a jury that under the law any quantity of bootleg whisky less than one gallon, purchased in the dry State of North Carolina, immediately assumes a legal status when it crosses into Virginia. Judge W. H. Sargeant, Corporation Court No. 1, concurred in this opinion.

It previously had been held the ABC law made legal, so far as the State is concerned, every drop of bootleg liquor in Virginia when the new act took effect, March 22.

Potato Embargo Asked To Raise Price Level

Richmond, June 18 (AP).—Potatoes which cost $2.50 a barrel to grow will not go from Virginia farms to markets where they bring $1.50 or less, if a request of Gov. George C. Peery is heeded.

The executive appealed to Virginia growers and distributors of Irish potatoes to withhold shipments until market conditions improve to a point where the tubers bring more reasonable prices. His request followed, he said, an appeal from Gov. Ehringhaus, of North Carolina, that Virginia and Maryland join in a movement he has instituted to bring relief to potato farmers.

Soap Monkeys Bring Award

Miss N. S. Koplin Wins Scholarship at Abbott School.

A pair of skillful hands, a keen imagination and lots of monkey business in soap have won a scholarship at Abbott School of Art for Miss Naomi S. Koplin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Koplin and granddaughter of Mrs. Simon Atlas.

Miss Koplin, who lives with her parents at 1714 Upshur street northwest, will be graduated from Central High School today. As a student she toiled with her soap sculpture, and also established somewhat of a reputation as a painter of dolls and designer of costumes.

The three soap monkeys, which focussed critical attention on Miss Koplin, are not of the "see no, hear no, speak no evil" variety. They might be grandfather, son and grandson, sitting in the same posture at some weird sort of stone age cocoanut worship.

Virginia Pastures Surveyed for Aid

Western Cattle May Be Brought Into State.

Richmond, June 19 (Spl.).—The Federal Emergency Relief Administration is making a survey of surplus Virginia pasturage with the idea of bringing cattle into the State from the drought-stricken Northwest for grazing, it was learned today.

Although a complete survey of the Old Dominion is being conducted by the VERA through county agents and other means, no commitment has been made as to bringing in cattle, Sidney Adair, executive assistant administrator, announced.

Should there be a surplus of grazing land, however, it will be utilized, if possible, to help out in the emergency by renting it and placing on it starving cattle from Western areas, he said.

Ohio Judge Is Promised Support From W. Va. Spanish War Group.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 19 (Spl.).—United Spanish War Veterans of the department of West Virginia, in annual convention here, today adopted resolutions pledging support of the State membership to Judge Edward S. Matthias, of Columbus, Ohio, past National commander and member of the Ohio State Supreme Court, as a candidate for President of the United States. Rice W. Means, former Senator from Colorado, was supported as a Vice Presidential candidate.

Resolutions also deplored the trend toward bureaucratic government in Washington and urged a return to principles of the Constitution "fought for and respected by us and our forefathers."

The veterans pledged themselves to support former soldiers, sailors and marines of high integrity for State and National offices.

Another resolution advocated free State-wide hunting and fishing licenses for all holding honorable discharges from the Navy, Army or Marine Corps.

European war debt defaulting nations and steps toward foreign alliances were condemned.

Happy Harry Hopkins.

Harry L. Hopkins' casual attitude toward the expenditure of billions from the Federal Treasury would be amusing in a Shavian satire depicting government as a farce. In a world of realities his loose talk about taxes and expenditures should further diminish waning public confidence in his administration of the FERA.

Reviewing the resources at his command and looking beyond at potential tax receipts, Mr. Hopkins says that he is not worried about relief funds. All that is now being spent can be repaid in taxes before the next depression, he opines. Indeed the administrator of the FERA, which has spent approximately $1,500,000,000 in a little more than a year, thinks the American people "do not know what real taxation is."

Mr. Hopkins' candid remarks are worthy of note because they reveal the policy which his agency is following. Money is being poured recklessly into relief channels as if finance were no part of the Government's grave problems. Doubtless this cheerful recklessness with other people's money is one reason why the cost of relief increased 12 per cent last month, while the number of families drawing benefits was diminished.

One of the vicious aspects of the FERA policy is that the money it spends so freely does not come out of current taxation. It is merely borrowed. If people were actually paying the taxes necessary to support such an orgy of spending, there would be a very different attitude toward the policies of the FERA. Taxpayers are beginning to realize that emergency organizations are placing a crushing mortgage on the country's future. The irony in this situation is that when taxpayers begin to suffer the consequences of loose governmental spending, the obligations against them will already have been created.

It must be this fact on which Mr. Hopkins is banking. For his attitude is strongly reminiscent of that merry French monarch who airily, and truthfull, predicted, "After me, the deluge."

An Official Observer.

Ever since he was elected Vice President, Mr. Garner has had to stand for considerable kidding about his job. It now appears that this has not bothered him in the least. In an article in the American magazine he reveals what he thinks of the Vice Presidency. It is an obscure office, he writes, far from being, as "toastmasters and caption writers say," the second most important post in the Republic. "Delightful it is," says the ruddy and genial former Representative from Texas, "but almost entirely unimportant." "I wouldn't have chosen the job," he confesses, saying that he could not refuse it as acceptance was an obligation to a party "that has supported me for 30 years." But now that he has it, he likes it.

Mr. Garner's article is delightful and refreshing. It is far from being what he calls a Public Utterance of a Statesman, but is the confession of a man whose only work is to preside over the Senate and, in this Administration, anyway, to attend Cabinet meetings. There is, however, a touch of pathos running through it. Jack Garner misses the House and the excitement that he knew for so many years. But an unfailing sense of humor allows him gently to kid himself for occupying an unimportant post, where there is less work, less power, and less responsibility than he has ever had before.

All Mr. Garner has to do now is to take life easy, go fishing, and "dress up fancy" now and then. Of course he has a good precedent to be a "show horse" (his phrase) if he wants to, but he doesn't. Even when, sitting over the Senate, his trained political mind sees things that are wrong, it doesn't do him any good to fuss, because as he says, he "hasn't even the power to initiate reform." He would like to see fewer Senate committees with fewer members; thinks that would forward efficiency. But he can't do anything about it: "The Vice President can only observe."

Clearing Up The Docket.

The District Supreme Court's approach to a clear docket represents a real achievement. Companies and individuals who file suits in the local court have been accustomed to waiting three or four years for a hearing. Trials may now take place within a few months of the time legal proceedings are instituted.

The courts have been slow to adopt systematic plans of procedure. Jurists throughout the country are now learning that a little planning enables them to hear more cases without sacrificing thorough analysis or any legitimate prerogative of the litigants. A few years ago the Supreme Court of the United States took the lead in this movement to make justice swift as well as sure, and quite a number of lesser tribunals have followed. It is gratifying to find the District Supreme Court clearing its docket by the same business-like procedure.

When our legal machinery lags several years behind the affairs of the day justice is often distorted. The ideal of justice becomes more of a tenuous promise than a present actuality. Steps which are being taken to eliminate delay from legal procedure may ultimately exercise a far greater influence upon our civilization than many reforms which are currently regarded as panaceas.

Reason Seeks To Rise.

While it would be idle to underestimate the strength of the dictatorship which the Nazi movement has fettered upon Germany, spontaneous rumblings from that country now for the first time permit a hope that the medieval fanaticism there dominant is losing its grip.

Resentment to continued suppression among the sorely tried German people is evidenced by the courageous speech, in behalf of the right to criticize, made to the students of exclusive Marburg University by Vice Chancellor von Papen. It is also found in the resignation of Count Nadolny as Ambassador to Russia. This resignation is a direct result of Hitler's recent refusal to conclude a non-aggression pact with Russia. Here is a strong protest against the inept foreign policy of the Nazi government, just as the Von Papen speech is fundamentally a denunciation of the domestic bungling of that regime.

Much of the significance of these protests lies in the character of their sponsors. Both Von Papen and Nadolny are representative of the former ruling classes in Germany, cultured men of conservative traditions who resent the crude, mountebank, gate-crashing type which has taken the third Reich into its keeping under Hitler. To many Germans of the aristocratic school the Hitler regime is doubtless becoming far more distasteful than the social democracy which triumphed after the war. Here is a type, of which old President von Hindenburg himself is an excellent example, to whom the crudity of the Nazis is instinctively anathema. And it is a type which provides many of the essentials, as well as much of the ruthlessness, of German strength.

While submerged and subordinated by the Nazi wave it has been certain that adherents of the old regime would soon or late attempt to assert their dignity and self-respect against what cultured Germans, in their hearts, regard as the rabble of Heil-Hitlering Nazis. This endeavor has doubtless been forwarded by the accumulating evidence of Hitler's inability either to restore German prestige abroad or to halt economic decay at home. Perhaps the ineffectual Venice conversations, in which Mussolini so obviously patronized the German Chancellor, have been the last straw for the endurance of the aristocrats with a real, instead of a simulated, pride of race.

Few would be so reckless as to predict how the development now launched in Germany will develop. The dictatorship may turn against its well-born critics with the same ferocity that it has shown toward other dissenters. Rather than permit that spirit of criticism which will end the tragic farce symbolized by the swastika, Hitler and his even more headstrong associates may prefer to bring Germany down in irrevocable ruin. The grotesque combination of inexperience and fatuousness headed by "Der Fuehrer" makes such outcome all too possible.

But a truly hopeful sign is the evident resentment in Germany to those tactics of regimentation which must inevitably stultify any form of government and destroy all chance of progress. The outside world, by its post-war vindictiveness toward Germany, bears some responsibility for the extraordinary neurosis which has turned a great people back toward barbarity. Appreciation of that should make all the World War victors look with the more sympathetic attention for any domestic effort to reestablish civilization across the Rhine.

Made In America.

In the first quarter-century of the Metropolitan Opera Company's existence—from 1883 to 1908—it did not present a single American opera. When Gatti-Casazza took up the directorship, however he conducted a contest, and Horatio Parker's "Mona" was produced. While the contest was in progress, in 1910, Frederick Converse's "The Pipe of Desire" was given. But for some reason Americans have never seemed to be able to write great operas. Lately the effort has been revived, and many a musician has attempted to outdo the produced works of Damrosch, Victor Herbert, Reginald De Koven, Charles W. Cadman, Henry Hadley, John Alden Carpenter, to mention some of the 16 natives who have been favored by having their operas produced by the Metropolitan.

Now comes word that an unknown musician, John Lawrence Seymour, has written an opera called "The Eunuch," which will be performed next season. This is described as a one-act libretto in English. It was chosen from several indigenous scores that were submitted. What will excite most music lovers, however, is the announcement that Lawrence Tibbett will appear, not in the title role, but as a sultan. Mr. Tibbett is the idol of the country, thanks to the radio, and the admired of the musical intelligentsia, thanks to his moving and sensational appearance in "The Emperor Jones."

Tibbett has sung in two other American-made operas. One was Howard Hansen's "Merrymount," wherein the idol took the part of a Puritan preacher. From preacher in one season to sultan in the next is nothing in Mr. Tibbett's vivid career. The other was "Peter Ibbetson," by our own Deems Taylor, also not unknown to the vast radio audience through his weekly appearance under the auspices of a cheese manufacturer. All three scores were performed last season, which saw American opera at its height.

It is a long way from "The Pipe of Desire" and "Mona" to John Alden Carpenter's "Skyscraper," a "mechanistic ballet," one of the sensations of the Metropolitan, or to the forthcoming "Eunuch," written by a young Californian. And we have to thank the Italian-born Gatti-Casazza for all of the ten American works that have gone between. His insistence upon producing works by native artists has done much to take the curse off the opera season, which to many had become merely the repetition of "Aida," and the display of boiled shirts beside bare shoulders.

The Farm Bankruptcy Bill.

The substance of the Frazier-Lemke farm bankruptcy bill has been overshadowed by the manner of its passage through Congress. It is a very important piece of legislation involving the sanctity of contracts as well as the propriety of extending bankruptcy statutes. Yet it was finally approved by Congress before the public realized that it was under serious consideration.

Congress obviously accepted the measure to avoid prolonging its session. The Senate meekly submitted to a filibuster threat even though this bill had been previously opposed by Administration leaders. No doubt some members were influenced by a desire to make a favorable impression on the farmer just before returning home for re-election campaigns. At any rate, Congress surrendered to the agricultural bloc without a struggle, and President Roosevelt is now confronted by the question of vetoing a sweeping measure which was not on his legislative program.

Farmers were given the right of adjusting their debts through agreements with a majority of creditors by a previous amendment of the bankruptcy act. But this bill carries the process of easing the farmer's obligations much further. The farmer may ask the Federal Court to adjudge him a bankrupt. The court would then appoint appraisers to decide upon "the fair value" of his property. With the consent of lien holders, the trustee would resell the land to the farmer, or that part not covered by exemptions, at the new appraised value. Payments would extend over six years, beginning at 2½ per cent of the appraised value, and interest would be charged at the rate of only 1 per cent.

In case creditors should object to this method of settlement, the court would be required to stay all proceedings for five years. During this interim farmers would retain their land and pay rent thereon, and at the end of the five years they would have the privilege of buying it at the appraised value, or at any value fixed by a new appraisal.

In effect, the bill appears to give farmers virtually a five-year moratorium on their mortgages. Congress had already made liberal provisions for the renewal of farm mortgages, in addition to offering agricultural credit for virtually all purposes and paying crop-reduction benefits. Passage of this bill, which is obviously class legislation and is of questionable constitutionality, seems inexcusable. Probably many members of Congress, anxious to adjourn, voted with expectation of a Presidential veto.

A Joke Adjuster.

With the late Thomas L. Masson humor was a serious business. He was editor of Life for nearly 30 years at a time when the magazine was to be found in every barber-shop along with tattered copies of the Police Gazette and in select households which had never heard of that pink and popular sheet. It was as a writer of quips, old-fashioned quips of the He and She variety, that Masson did his most lucrative work. He never built up a huge fortune, but he made enough money at the task to become the idol of that great mass of people who imagine that through system and enterprise they, too, can supply the editors of the world with just what they need.

Tom Masson had a system and it worked. Before he ever wrote a joke for publication he studied assiduously what he called the architecture of the joke. After this apprenticeship he was ready to write hundreds and hundreds of jokes which he sent out to editor after editor. He started with the best paying, and if his miniature works of art were rejected, he worked down the scale. He never retired a joke except through sale. His system for writing he described this way: "As long as you have the architecture of a joke in mind, even if it dates back to ancient Egypt, new conditions are always arising to which the old form can be adjusted."

It is said that Masson sold some 50,000 jokes over a 29-year period for a grand total of $35,000. That's a lot of money for being funny as a sideline. The jokes he wrote were worth what he got for them. They made many a person laugh in the early years of this century, and if they are terribly dated now, so will the current "sophisticated" gags seem pretty flat when looked at in the files a few years hence. Then we shall need another scientific joke adjuster, to bring the wise-cracks of today to date.

Discipline In Order.

It is charitable to assume that Postmaster General Farley "forgot" to obey President Roosevelt's instructions about preparing a bill to bring all postmasters under Civil Service regulations. Any man who must divide his attention between the chairmanship of the Democratic National committee and the Postoffice Department might overlook such a detail. But as a matter of fact, Mr. Farley did not forget.

On several occasions the attention of the Postmaster General has been directed to this duty. Plans for the drafting of such a measure have been discussed at the Postoffice Department. But nothing was done. The President's instructions were ignored.

Perhaps it is too much to expect the chief patronage dispenser of the party in power to produce a bill that would eliminate the spoils system from his own department. Mr. Farley couldn't serve both his masters. Under the circumstances it is only natural that politics should again take precedence over "planned economy."

The surprising thing is that the President allows his instructions, especially those given in public, to be thus ignored by politicians who place the interests of party above those of the public.

Defending the Brain Trust.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To many unbiased observers all of this argument and controversy that is going on over the professors and the Brain Trust is being considerably overplayed, especially by some of our prominent legislators, since a good many of their present arguments contradict many of their past theories and performances.

When these arguments are boiled down they chiefly consist of two lines of criticism: First, that the professors are not competent to deal in a practical way with these problems, at least not nearly as competent as the average business man, politician or Congressman; second, that these professors and Brain Trusters have no regard for our American institutions or our Constitution, and are altogether dangerous fellows.

Suppose we reason a little along these two lines, cite some facts and produce the record. When was it ever considered that a man who had given a great many years of his life pursuing the study of some problem or theory, aided by all the facilities and the faculty of our best colleges and universities, plus the practical experience in the great laboratory of everyday life knew less about this subject than one who has never made any study of the problem and has perhaps only recently had to think about it at all? If such is usually the fact, then our encouragement of learning through all the ages, and all we have spent on our institutions of learning have been in vain. Not that I am undertaking to defend all the mental processes or the conclusions derived therefrom of all our professors, but I do contend that one who has given long and serious study to a subject has the advantage over one who has not.

It seems both unfair and silly to cry Communist or wrecker of the Constitution at everyone who suggests some new method or idea that might work to our advantage simply because it's different from the way we ever did it before.

A "Quiet" Book.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read the brief for the "Gentle Reader" that Mr. Curtis wrote in the Atlantic Monthly, and in The Post of June 16 I find the Impressionist discussing the possibilities for the "quiet" book staging a comeback.

Recently I read a book, published in 1932, which seems to satisfy all the requirements for a "Gentle Reader" type of book. The plan of action was not direct like the arrow, but was as meandering as a Boston street. The author-guide wanders far from the path to bring the "Gentle Reader" a choice anecdote. He stops again to point out someone on the other side of the street or to tell the reader ideas in the back of his mind on architecture, theology or the art of salesmanship.

Without a conversational guide the "Gentle Reader" finds travel slow and uninteresting. One is almost sorry to see the story develop in "Human Being," because when it is completed he will miss the companionship of the entertaining Christopher Morley.

From a Class Angle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I've been a constant reader and, in fact, a booster of The Post since it changed hands. In my opinion it has the ability of analysis of the American and international situation. It has very good feature writers and excellent book and theater critics. In a word, it has everything a signal capitalistic paper should have. But, here comes a local labor situation and The Post can not and does not even make an attempt to hide its class face. The reporting of the carpenters' strike, though on the face impartial, always tries to present the case in such a fashion the workers of the United States can not expect a square deal from their bosses. The only way they can obtain a just livelihood is by fighting for it together with all the other workers and not try the help of the capitalistic press or corrupt union leaders.

The Way to a Man's Heart.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: a bridge party the other evening I heard four couples enter into a spirited discussion of the relative merits of the eating places in Washington. The men voted strongly for a local establishment because they said there was such variety and it was so unlike home cooking.

What's happened to our American women and their art of finding the way to a man's heart through his stomach? Why doesn't the conversation turn toward the way things are prepared at home rather than the wonderful way things taste when one doesn't get them at home? Can this have something to do with the conjugal unrest? Is the road to Reno traveled mostly by men wanting a change of cooking?

"There Was a Fight."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "There Was a Fight" perfectly describes the battle of adjectives which took place in Madison Square Garden Bowl. This engagement was so fierce that it was with difficultly one could discern the nouns and pronouns which supposedly were the center of attraction.

I am anxious to know if one of the sports writers recovered—the one who broke into print with, "Heart, for God's sake stop pounding and let me write." Poor man! Didn't he know that he was going to cover a prize fight, not a game of tiddledlwinks? The sight of Baer and Carnera scrapping in the ring probably gave him indigestion, for which I would recommend a quarter teaspoon of baking soda in a glass of water. It would be well for him in the future to remain away from such desperate encounters.

"Frail, Delicate Daughters."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congress has been very liberal in making all sorts of appropriations and yet has overlooked the needs of frail, delicate daughters of Confederate soldiers who are without home and an adequate means of support; some are reduced through the dishonesty of others. Some who are opposed to the daughters being pensioned are making a comfortable living at their expense.

A minister has said that we are living in an age of shams and hypocrisy.

The Carpenters State Their Case.

We have received, and are glad to print, the following statement from the strike committee of the Carpenters' Union explaining the basic position of that union in the local labor dispute. While this strike, happily, now shows signs of an approaching settlement we feel it appropriate to offset editorial opinion, already expressed, by this official presentation of the labor side in the controversy.

History is repeating itself in the labor movement. We find labor trying to improve its condition with very little success. Capital has fortified itself by massive organization, today more than at any other time in the history of the world. Its strangle hold is retarding and crushing civilization at a time when civilization should be making its greatest advance.

Labor is not advancing as fast as capital because the fruits of labor are controlled by capital, which uses them to combat labor. The purpose of life to live and let live is destroyed. History proves the futility of strivings in the past. But men have formed tribes, clans, fraternal orders, religious groups and labor unions for their protection. The last named, the labor union, if properly managed and controlled, can be the most useful. Capital's progress is due to organization, so labor must also organize if it is to exist.

Your attention is called to the present condition in the carpenters' strike here in Washington, D. C., this condition having been brought about by the master builders working in collaboration with other contractors. These master builders, because they have been working in harmony with the general contractors as well as the subcontractors, are exploiting labor. But its effect does not stop there as it also affects local business of all kinds.

We regard the subcontractor as a slave-driver because he wants to exist and exploiting labor is a convenient means for him to get his livelihood. The master builders are similar so far as labor is concerned, though they deal directly with the owners. The general contractor uses both the master builders and the subcontractors to his advantage, thus exploiting labor and the public.

The gathering of a horde of undesirables to the scene of our dispute is criminal. By dumping these men in our midst the contractors have only intensified the bitterness we feel toward them and scab labor. Strikebreakers are never brought into a city with any thought of permanence; when they have served, or failed to serve the purpose of the bosses, they will be turned loose among the decent citizens of Washington. They will either swell the relief rolls or go back to the jails with which some of them are very familiar. Character is certainly not a requisite of a strikebreaker. And if he has a criminal record he is just the man for the work, for the dirty job.

Our active pickets have been able to escort many of them to the District line and convince them that this dispute will be settled without their assistance. Recently we had an example of the open shop or non-union shop in the case of a local construction company. Bringing in labor from the South when there were thousands of idle building trades workers in Washington, this company paid these workers starvation wages and they were also indifferent to the safety of these men. This was proven by the collapse of a scaffold on one of the jobs, after the company had been warned several times by the building inspector. As a result, one worker was killed and another seriously injured. The foreman was indicted for manslaughter by the grand jury.

This same company was the lowest bidder on the new ward at a local hospital, but the Department of the Interior (to its credit) refused to consider the bid; this action was taken after organized labor had protested against the firm.

The carpenters know that only through a fight can they win their demands. And they are willing to support those leaders whom they can trust and will do everything possible to oust the political job seekers.

We justify the strike as a weapon of self-preservation and justice, and we contend that our wages should be high enough to enable us to maintain a decent standard of living and give us buying power sufficiently above that needed for the mere necessities of life.

The Post Impressionist

Marrying Matriculates.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

OUR excitable friend the Major sounds another warning. His letter containing this trumpet-calls bears both an air-mail and a special delivery stamp. These tokens of tribute to the department of Postmaster General Farley indicate the seriousness with which the Major regards his new topic. We do not pretend to agree with his thesis, yet we can not but respect the sincerity of his sentiments. So we publish something of what he says.

He writes:

"People can always get stirred up about something away off, but nobody'll believe there's anything wrong in his own house; that's why so many revolutions are successful. Here are Lothrop Stoddard and his disciples all hot and bothered about the advance of the yellow races in Asia, what he calls 'The Rising Tide of Color.' What we ought to look after is the Rising Tide of Women.

"I've been reading," the Major continues, "an article in Current History. It's alleged to be written by a woman professor of economics in a woman's college, Alzada Comstock, of Mount Holyoke—and if there's anywhere where economics ought to be taught it's somewhere to women. But this woman isn't talking about economics; she's talking about 'The College Girl, 1934 Model,' and she says 'femininity has returned to the campus.'

"That'd be a good thing, if true. I mean it would be good if it meant college girls were getting to be girls—girls like other girls used to be: I won't say 'returning' to that condition, for they weren't ever in it before; still I will say 'beginning.' But listen a minute.

"This Miss Comstock says 'the college girl spends less time discussing life and its problems than her sister of the Class of 1913 or 1917. Then each girl had a socio-personal problem to settle: Marriage or a Career! Many were the gas-jets which burned far, far into the night as the alternatives were discussed. The career usually won.'

"Comforting news, I say—if it was true. But is it? It isn't.

"The truth is that the college women are planning to keep their careers and get married, too—to go on getting men's work away from the men and yet get the men into the bargain. And to do this the college woman plans to get her man first—get him young, while she's still attractive and he's easily attracted.

"For I'd no sooner put down Current History and picked up the New York Herald Tribune than there I saw the inclosed!"

"The inclosed" is a clipping. It announces:

"Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Girls of Vassar College may marry and continue as students. . . . This departure from traditional regulations at Vassar and at virtually every other girls' school in the country was made public by Miss Eleanor Dodge, Warden of the College."

* * *

"There you are!" says the Major, "and will you be surprised to learn that The Vassar Miscellany News, 'undergraduate newspaper, commented favorably' on Miss Dodge's statement? I'm not surprised! The News pointed out that 'marriage may be a desirable consideration' for girl students because 'of the emotional security it would afford them while they are undertaking the work of obtaining an education.'

"Here's something there's no arguing about. It's what they call a self-evident fact. Thanks to the depression, men were beginning to get back some of the jobs they'd lost to women; what work there was would be given more often to the male applicant. The feminists saw that—and this is how they meet it.

"Miss Comstock's article gives the whole show away. She says that 'the background of the average college girl is less snug and the future more uncertain' than it was before hard times set in.

"In other words, there are lots fewer jobs and lots more job-hunters. There are lots fewer grown-up males who think they can afford to marry, but there are just as many college girls who want to play safe as there ever were, and just as many sap-head boys who'll fall for them. There isn't any question of the college-bred wife supporting the husband, you'll notice. It's a cold case of get your man early; he'll help support you at college; if you can't get a job afterward, he'll have to support you, and if you can get a job you can walk out on him any time you like.

"And The Vassar Miscellany News calls that 'emotional security!'

"I wonder," muses the Major, "where the girls' colleges will house the husbands of their student-wives. I wonder if they'll build special dormitories for the lads and let them out once a week. Of course, there'll be the expense of keepers and a permanent board of alienists, because nobody in his right mind would marry a girl undergraduate who was going on undergraduating—and, though such mental cases are generally harmless at the start, you could never tell when they'd become violent. Besides, look at the unsuccessful girl undergraduates—I mean the unmarried: I wonder how the faculties are going to manage the old jade Jealousy, and I wonder how, now they've gone in for college marriage, they're going to handle the problem of college divorce.

* * *

"But the thing that galls every sane man," concludes the Major, "is the nerve of the whole business. First the women wanted what they called 'higher education,' and we gave it to them. Then they wanted 'careers' instead of husbands—and they took the careers. And now they want both careers and husbands, too—and they're going to get both. You have to admit one thing about the cake-eaters: they're the sex that knows how to eat their cake and have it."

Carlisle Bargeron

The Rise of Burton Wheeler

THERE are many things the Republicans or conservatives should learn from their present predicament, but one very important one is that if they ever again get into power they should not try to manhandle such hard-headed gentlemen as Burton Wheeler. Burton was in the saddle in the Seventy-third session of Congress. He was, to my mind, much more influential than the so-called Democratic leaders. If there was anything Burton wanted that he did not get, at least, in part, it does not immediately appear.

BARGERON.

It was Burton's session. Along with the other Progressives he dominated it. It is my belief that Mr. Roosevelt followed him more than he followed Mr. Roosevelt. Certainly he did not follow the President on anything which he did not approve, which is another reason why he stands out in the session just closed.

• • • •

One never heard of Burton trotting to the White House seeking patronage, either. In fact, one did not hear so much of Burton at all. The only time he did go into action were when things were not going to his liking. There is, for example, the silver bill. All in all I suppose no one is more pleased with the work of the session than he, not even Mr. Roosevelt.

What Burton did do was to get busy in 1932 and work for the nomination of a man he thought would go along with his ideas. After the campaign he never seemed to try to impose his views on the President. Of all the would-be counselors Burton kept most in the background. He continued to work for his ideals in the Senate, though, and in every instance that comes to mind, Mr. Roosevelt soon or late came to his support, which is to say, of course, to the support of the Progressives generally.

This reflected a loyalty on Mr. Roosevelt's part that, back in the preconvention days, his opponents insisted he did not have. For better or worse, Mr. Roosevelt showed throughout the session a deep appreciation of the men responsible for his getting the nomination. Apparently he considered, and rightly so, that it was the nomination which gave him the Presidency. Any Democrat would have won the election.

He has not even yet warmed up to those who were not FRBC men. In some instances he has tolerated them apparently as necessary evils. In others he hasn't even done this.

Yet there is no question that in the session just closed they were less embarrassing to him than the Progressives. The latter made him swallow many things he didn't like. If he subsequently gets into trouble it will be because of what the Progressives have forced on him, not anything those who were his enemies before Chicago have done.

• • • •

But getting back to Burton's rise and his dominance in the Progressive ranks, which certainly controlled the session, I am satisfied he would have been more lenient, so to speak, had it not been for the treatment he received when he first came to Washington. The Conservatives were at the height of their smugness then. Their tactics were to treat with contempt anyone who disturbed their serenity and, if this failed, to wreck him.

They tried it on Burton. They gave him at first what had theretofore been a very successful treatment, social ostracization. It had mellowed many a man. It didn't work with Burton.

When he went after Harry Daugherty they cried indignantly that he went outside the rules, that he was not playing the game as "gentlemen" played it. They heaped plenty of abuse upon him, in fact. Yet there can't be the slightest doubt that Daugherty should have been kicked out and that Burton's course was the only way to do it.

Then they retaliated by trying to ruin him.

He wouldn't be human if this treatment hadn't hardened him, hadn't left him with a deep resentment toward the philosophy that ruled in that day. But it is a tribute to the man's tenacity and sincerity that they didn't break him. And oh boy, did they have to play in the session just ended.

Whether you accept Burton's views or not, or those of the rest of the Progressives, these men are, in my opinion, of far more service to the country than those whose conduct was governed by patronage.

Japan's Naval Ratio Held Correct Today

Rear Admiral Pratt, Discussing Prospects for 1935 Sea Power Conference, Sees No Logical Grounds for Increase in Far East.

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP).—A careful examination of the world naval problem, in the opinion of Rear Admiral William V. Pratt, adviser to the American delegation at the 1930 London Naval Conference, reveals no logical grounds for Japan to claim an increased ratio of sea power in comparison with the United States and Great Britain.

Writing in the quarterly review, Foreign Affairs, on the prospects of the 1935 naval conference, now the subject of preparatory conversations in London, the American expert declared that "the Japanese claim for an actual increase in her naval ratio will not further the purpose of peace, and must find other reasons than equality and security."

Despite the lack of acceptable grounds for an increased ratio, however, Admiral Pratt pointed out that Japan "has a just claim to equality in treatment in other respects and until that claim is recognized there will remain a feeling of tension."

"International relations," he wrote in this connection, "must be based on a spirit of fair play, equality and justice if peace is to be kept."

Respect for Each Other Seen International Need.

THE admiral's analysis showed no reason why friendly relations should not be maintained between the United States and Japan "so long as each country respects the other's rights, lives up to its treaty obligations, enters no trade wars, develops no superiority complex, starts no war propaganda, attends strictly to its own business."

"The Pacific," he pointed out, "has not been the breeder of war hurricanes that the Atlantic and Mediterranean have been."

Regardless of all technical and political considerations, however, Admiral Pratt holds that the economic situation at the time will play an important part in the 1935 parley.

If the world is "actually on the road out of a depression resulting largely from the last war," he wrote, "and if many tariff and financial questions are in the process of fair adjustment, this fact will do much to soften the present rather harsh political atmosphere and bring to the next conference a spirit of greater optimism."

"Men and their attitude toward each other," will count for more, he continued, "than any logical presentation of facts."

One of the mentally disturbing elements, as the admiral sees it, is the fact that powers depending on naval forces have shown more willingness to make concessions than those whose natural position emphasizes the land and air divisions of national defense.

The movement to stabilize peace through limitation, he wrote, "will never get under way successfully until military and air power enter the discussion on the same basis as sea power and walk the same path."

Japan Does Not Need Larger Ratio, Says Pratt.

EXAMINING Japan's position, Admiral Pratt found that she does not need a larger ratio than the short end of the present 5-5-3 because:

1. She does not have to cover the seas of the world as does Great Britain.

2. She does not have two great ocean fronts as does the United States.

3. As a neutral she would not have the heavy responsibilities of the United States and Great Britain.

4. No nation, after taking care of essential responsibilities at home and elsewhere, could blockade Japan.

5. Japan's national income does not justify any claim which might be based on that phase of comparison.

Japan, the American expert believes, "has some rights on her side" in her campaign in Manchuria resulting in the setting up of the Empire of Manchukuo.

"From a technical and military standpoint," he wrote, "Japan had a weak link in her armor unless she had a foothold in Manchuria.

"Every time she had gained this foothold by war, she had been made to give it up by outside pressure. Under these circumstances, other nations might have felt just as she did—previous to signing the nine-power pact and the Paris peace pact.

"They might not have acted in the same way after having signed these agreements. They would have tried to find other ways to get their requirements satisfied."

Jobless Aid Seen Government Peril

Strain Too Great, Says Dr. N. E. Richardson.

Front Royal, Va., June 19 (Spl.).—"Governments can not stand the financial strain of carrying through to ultimate success a program of expenditures to meet the needs of the millions of unemployed, and the people of the Middle West are tired of the policy of the present Administration in giving out money under this program, which eventually must be paid," said Dr. Norman E. Richardson, of Chicago, last night in the opening address of the seventh annual Training School for Pastors and Lay Workers of Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Church South, in Randolph-Macon Academy, here.

Dr. Richardson, president of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, added that "neither can private philanthropy any longer take care of the economic needs of a society operating under the development of a mechanical age. Only a statesmanlike program of political, economic and social reconstruction, permeated by love, can save modern society from the alternatives of a class struggle under the leadership of those devoted to the Marxian philosophy."

The territory represented by students in attendance extends from the Eastern Shore of Maryland to Roanoke, and from Baltimore to southwestern Pennsylvania and Hinton, W. Va. Among the centers represented are Baltimore, Washington, Alexandria, Clarendon Fredericksburg, Winchester, Cumberland, Md., Harrisonburg, Staunton and Roanoke.

Delaware Wars On Mosquitoes

More Than 400 CCC Workers Participate.

Rehoboth Beach, Del., June 19 (Spl.).—More than 400 CCC workers are busy near here and elsewhere in southern Delaware in waging war on the noted Delaware Mosquitoes.

The workers of the two camps near here have dug 336 miles of new ditches in swamps and cleaned out 250 miles of old ditches since starting to work about 10 days ago. Directors of the work hope to rid all of the State's 107,500 acres of tidal marshes, favorite breeding places of mosquitoes, of the past.

The headquarters of the Delaware State Mosquito Commission, headed by W. S. Corkran, is at Lewes.

Footnotes and Gossip.

IF you have ever read one of John Buchan's Greenmantle and Huntingtower stories, you are probably a confirmed Buchanite for life. Nothing, I'm sure, approaches them in the way of romantic adventure. Devotees will lift up their hearts at the news that Buchan, now Lord High Commissioner for Scotland, has just sent Houghton-Mifflin the manuscript of a new novel in his best vein. "The Free Fishers," set against a Scottish background, will appear soon . . . The three most popular Thorne Smith extravaganzas are "Turnabout," "The Night Life of the Gods" and "The Bishop's Jaegars," Doubleday-Doran reports them in the fourteenth, twelfth and eleventh printings, respectively . . . George Milburn, awarded a Guggenheim fellowship this year, has gone to England for a long stay. I hope he remembers that a bird in Oklahoma is worth two in the British Isles.

Items for future publication: Branch Cabell's "Ladies and Gentlemen," to be issued by McBride in the fall, will attack wittily a number of long-touted worthies of history and legend, including Pocahontas, George Washington, Penelope, Ananias, Julius Caesar, Sir Galahad, Falstaff, La Pompadour and Jonah . . . Thomas Mann's brother, Heinrich Mann, will be on the Dutton list early next year with a novel to be called "The Hill of Lies." Herr Mann was the first literary exile of the Hitler regime. He had been president of the Writers' Section of the Prussian Academy of Arts, but nevertheless he was forced to flee to France . . . Harcourt Brace reports that the first volume of Vilfredo Pareto's monumental "The Mind and Society" has been sent to the printer. The three other volumes will follow shortly. Careful translation has meant a good deal of delay, but publication is expected about the middle of October . . . Ellen Glasgow, after working two years on a novel about the Shenandoah Valley, has just finished the first draft. Revision will take another year, when the book will be published by Doubleday-Doran . . . W. W. Haines, a young but expert high tension linesman who helped electrify the Pennsylvania tracks from New York to Washington, has written a first novel on this most dangerous trade. "Slim" will be issued by Little Brown in August . . . Elissa Landi is in New York to adorn the imminent publication by Doubleday-Doran of her fourth novel, "The Ancestor." It is about a prima donna who wants to believe that love is everything.

President Roosevelt said recently of "Jefferson and Hamilton," a study (Houghton-Mifflin) by Claude G. Bowers, present Ambassador to Spain: "It would be a supreme contribution to current thought if the simple historic facts of this books could be learned in the newspaper editorial rooms as well as in the homes and schools of America." . . . "Arms and the Men," an invaluable pamphlet on the armaments racket reprinted by Doubleday-Doran from Fortune Magazine, is sold only by mail, price 10 cents. Yet the edition of 50,000 copies is all but exhausted. Wall street collectors quote the issue of Fortune which contained the article at $5. . . . James Norman Hall and Charles Nordhoff expect to complete the writing of "Pitcairn's Island" by the end of June. . . . Alexander Woollcott recently noted in the New Yorker some of the proper names he thought the funniest. But these have nothing on the names of some of the Indians who indorsed Gillmor and Wetherill's "Traders to the Navajos" (Houghton-Mifflin). The Redskins boast such cognomens, translated as: Big Mud, Lost His Shoe, The One Who Won't Eat Goat, Gap Between His Teeth, Mustache's Son, Scattered Whiskers, and Son of the Man Who Looked Like a Bunch of Rags Thrown Down.

The National Gallery

THOMAS HARRIS MacDONALD, Chief, United States Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture. Appointed while still a young man (1919) to a post of blazing trails in pioneer movement to provide a Federal aid system of highways. Carried his job through with zest, imagination and resource that would have credited an oldster. Fresh from Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanics, he became instrumental in building up one of the best State road systems in the country. A Republican, he was appointed by Secretary of Agriculture David H. Houston, a Democrat. His job no political football, he has remained since, administering 200,000 miles of gleaming highways enabling the great public to go places. Blue-eyed, canny, he hugs his desk but gets enthusiastic over the open spaces. Likes to pound rocks, hunt for road sites and breathe ozone.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

When Princess Wears Blue Everybody Likes Blue

By Robert Quillen

It is the age-old custom of man to rid himself of faults by calling them virtues.

A case in point is the universal assumption that residence in a great city is proof of superiority—that individual excellence increases in proportion to the size of the population.

As a matter of fact, the inclination to huddle is prompted by fear—fear of loneliness, fear of space, fear of being unlike the majority.

There was a time, ages ago, when a crowd meant safety. The larger tribe was safe from the smaller one. The stranger and the outlander were enemies and legitimate victims. To be outside the city walls or unlike the majority was to invite destruction.

Herding together for protection is no longer necessary, but the instinct to follow the crowd and conform to majority custom remains.

Belief in the city dweller's superiority still survives, also, but with less reason.

In the time of our fathers, city people were more civilized than countrymen. Their greater number afforded more good examples, and all were benefitted by their natural tendency to mimic their betters. Moreover, the city's concentration of wealth provided cultural advantages that rural districts could not afford.

But now the "hick" goes to college and travels everywhere; books and periodicals are delivered at the farmer's door, and the hermit in the midst of the darkest forest can hear the best of music, the greatest of pulpit orations and the most brilliant lectures.

The city's few remaining advantages, such as art galleries and museums, get most of their patronage from tourists in town to see the sights, so that modern city dwellers as a whole, profit little if any by the advantages they have.

This truth, once understood, should overcome the prejudice and the fear of ridicule that now defeat all efforts to settle the city's crowded millions on the land.

It isn't the fear of starving that makes the jobless metropolitan reluctant to move. Make the world believe countrymen superior to city folk and there wouldn't be farms enough to supply the demand.

Waynesboro Gets New Bus Service

Will Connect With P. R. R. at Greencastle.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 19 (Spl.).—The inaccessibility to Waynesboro by train was appeased somewhat today when announcement was made by the Manufacturers' Association that a contract had been signed between a bus line here and the Pennsylvania Railroad to trasnport passengers from here to the main line of the road at Greencastle.

The Greencastle station on the direct route from Harrisburg to Winchester, Va., is just nine miles from Waynesboro. Several years ago the Pennsylvania Railroad discontinued passenger service to this city because of decreased patronage. Bus service between here and Greencastle and Chambersburg took care of the passengers, but connections were unsatisfactory.

The new service, at 50 cents per passenger, includes travel between the two points to make all train connections on the Pennsylvania, calling for passengers at hotels, homes or offices, and delivering them in Greencastle or Waynesboro in the case of inbound traffic.

College Commencements.

This is the open season for the cap and gown, and the word "commencement" is a good word to describe it, for while it is the end of the undergraduate course, it is the beginning of life in the world.

I have seen a complete change come over the attitude of outsiders toward these academic festivities, and toward the young men and young women, most of whom make their first and last appearance on the stage. Forty years ago the commencement season was the signal for jokes in most of the newspapers, and especially in the editorial columns; the young baccalaureates were represented as a combination of ignorance and conceit, who, armed with their diplomas, entered the office of a captain of industry and proceeded to tell him how to run his business. And the comic papers always welcomed the annual event, as it gave them a blessed opportunity for pen and pencil.

All this has been changed. Just as the first riders of bicycles were saluted with missiles from small boys, because bicycle owners were rare, and ceased to be so saluted when everybody had a bicycle, so when college graduates ceased to be a small and privileged class, and hundreds of thousands were baccalaureated within the space of a few years, there was no point in making jokes at their expense.

But the more vital reason was that the value of a college degree, instead of being lessened by the enormous increase of numbers, became infinitely more appreciated. It was seen by the world that a college graduate as a rule got on better and faster than if he had not had that distinction; not merely because he had studied more subjects, but because he knew how to deal with all classes of persons, and was at ease in human intercourse. American colleges are not primarily institutions of learning; they are training grounds for life in the world. I have been told that some department stores will employ only girls who are college graduates.

Perhaps the World War emphasized more than any other one thing the value of a liberal college education. When the college men and the non-college men struggled together to win a commission, the advantage of the college trained was apparent. He had never studied either military tactics or navigation, but he knew how to do so. To work up a subject was a familiar task. After the war the rush to the colleges really began.

For my part, I believe in a college education not because it makes for efficiency, but because it adds to the happiness of those men and women who have it. By that I do not mean "college life." Many undergraduates are unhappy. I mean that it enriches the life of those who have had it by enriching their minds; it opens a world of thought and art and culture; it makes a larger personality.

The highest success in life is to be a good parent, a good husband, a good wife, a good son, a good daughter, a good brother, a good sister, a good friend. To have an interesting personality is to be unconsciously a blessing.

The Once Over

By

H. I. Phillips

Study of a Conference.

In Venice, land of gondoliers,
They met and talked and got some cheers;
They posed for photographs galore—
They talked a bit and posed some more;
When by this strain they both were shaken,
They paused and had their pictures taken.

• • • •

Said Mussolini to Adolf Hitler,
"You're looking fit, but I look fitler;"
Said Hitler to the great Benito,
"This moving picture life is sweet. Oh!"—
They talked of this, they talked of that—
Then for their photographs they sat.

• • • •

The day was hot, the times were hotter,
World institutions seemed to totter;
They talked a lot as bugles tooted,
They talked some more and then saluted.

• • • •

Said Hitler, "Well, I don't know whether I've ever seen more lovely weather;"
Said Mussolini, "June, I'm thinking,
Is quite a month for heavy thinking."—
They talked of birds and bees and then
They posed a while for newsreel men.

• • • •

Said Mussolini, "You're looking swell,
I trust your folks are pretty well;"
Said Hitler, "Strictly on the quiet,
I'm very careful of my diet;
My folks are very careful, too—
Say, how the hell are things with you?"
They then saluted, talked and laughed
A while while they were photographed.

• • • •

Said Adolf Hitler to Mussolini,
"Remember when a king and queen
Could rule a land with little jeering
And never hear much else but cheering?"
Said Mussolini, "I'm glad I metcha;
This'll all be front page stuff, I betcha."
Then they swapped salutes and they stood quite meekly
For another shot by a newsreel weekly.

• • • •

They talked of peace and war and such
And didn't say so very much;
'Twas a big event and I'll tell you why—
The film consumed set a new world high!

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For).

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

Louisiana marches by today in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States. New Jersey will appear Thursday; Maine on Friday and Oregon on Sunday. Then will follow the remainder of the States—Rhode Island, Tennessee, Virginia and New York.

To Louisiana.

A land where romance ever lingers
Provoking thoughts of bygone days—
Of velvets, laces, pale jeweled fingers
And candelabra all ablaze—
For not a spot in this wide Nation
Can furnish more enchanting scenes
Really to fire imagination
Than "Crescent City"—New Orleans.
Yet this State thrives not on tradition
But sulphur, lumbering and oil—
Great industries and her position
For ocean commerce and her soil
Where sugar cane grows to perfection
And rice and cotton crops are great—
These are the pride of every section
Of Louisiana—the Pelican State.

BAKER.

ROBERT CAVELIER, Sieur de la Salle, came down the Mississippi to its mouth in 1682 and formally confirmed the French title to the vast territory of the Mississippi Valley near the present site of New Orleans on April 9. Amid shouts, volleys of musketry and chants of the priests, the area was named Louisiane in honor of King Louis XIV. It was La Salle's dream to establish an empire for France in the West. However, that dream perished when he returned to the country in 1687 and was murdered by some of his own men who accused him of harsh treatment. Thus ignobly died one of the greatest of America's early explorers.

The first settlement in what is now Louisiana was made by Iberville in 1699 about 40 miles above the mouth of the Mississippi. The colony did not prosper for many years as the young Frenchmen were more interested in adventure and gaiety than in establishing permanent homes in the New World.

But, due to the strategic location of New Orleans as a port for ocean vessels and an outlet for the commerce of the rich central portion of the continent, the city grew and soon became the Southern metropolis.

The story of the Louisiana Purchase is a familiar one—how Napoleon, in need of money for his European wars, sold to President Jefferson for a song ($15,000,000) in 1804 that vast inland tract called Louisiana. Historians say that Napoleon sought to establish a strong America as a rival to England, his most formidable obstacle in the subjugation of Europe.

Soon after Louisiana's entry into the United States, New Orleans was the site of one of the bloodiest battles of the War of 1812. It was a unique battle in that it was fought after peace had been signed. News of the treaty, however, did not reach New Orleans in time to prevent the slaughter.

That portion of Louisiana south of 33 degrees was organized as the Territory of Orleans. On April 30, 1812, it became the State of Louisiana.

Plantation life thrived in Louisiana, and thus the State was one of the leaders in the secession movement that terminated in the Civil War. New Orleans was captured early in the struggle by a Federal naval force and the city seethed under the military rule of Gen. Butler.

The Louisianans were good Confederate soldiers, being expert marksmen with pistol, rifle and sword. Gen. Beauregard, who was in charge of the capture of Fort Sumter, which precipitated the war, was one of the most able Southern generals.

Baton Rouge.

Baton Rouge (red stick), the capital, was founded on the high banks of the Mississippi in 1699. A French document of that date states that the settlers saw a red corn stalk with some heads of fish and bear stuck upon it, apparently as an offering to some spirit in thanks for a successful Indian hunting trip. It was from this that the French called it Baton Rouge.

JEFFERSON CAFFREY, of New Orleans, former Assistant Secretary of State, is Ambassador to Cuba. He is a career diplomat and has served in Tokyo, Berlin and Madrid.

Louisiana was the eighteenth State admitted to the Union. It is the twenty-second in population (2,101,593 in 1930), and the thirtieth in size (48,506 square miles).

IF your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal diary editor the same day. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Wallace Beery in "Viva Villa"); or to Loew's Palace (Joan Crawford and Fanchot Tone in "Sadie McKee"); or to Loew's Fox (stage, Frank and Milt Britton, Sheila Barrett and others; screen, Marion Davies and Gary Cooper in "Operator 13"). Diary office hours are: Daily except Sundays, 12 m. to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 m. to 2:30 p. m.

"Creole" is a popular designation of Louisiana people and customs, in references to the fact that most of Louisiana's inhabitants are descendants of French and Spanish settlers. It is a flagrant error to think that the term "Creole" implies any mixture of Negro or Indian blood, as some persons in the North have imagined.

Among the prominent Louisianans in Washington is W. F. Drown, acting chief of the World War Division, War Department.

Singing his way through school, I. L. Whitehouse (*), of Alexandria, is now making a mark for himself in Washington music circles. Mr. Whitehouse is employed at NRA. He is a member of the "Flying Quartet" of the United States Voluntary Air Service.

E. Wales Brown, of Shreveport, recently received an appointment in Cotton Production Section, AAA. Mr. Brown is an alumnus of Harvard University.

Among the charming Louisiana girls in Government service are Miss Mary Lee Sullivan, NRA; Miss Virginia Benjamin, Navy; Miss Cecelia Gale, Agriculture, and Miss Jessie Yates (*), Veterans' Administration.

Youngest Representative.

of New Orleans, president of the Louisiana State Society. Mr. Wooton is Washington correspondent for the New Orleans Times Picayune.

New Orleans (the First Louisiana district). Mr. Fernandez is the youngest member of the Louisiana delegation. His first campaign was for delegate to the Constitutional convention. Winning that, he entered other races and finally won a seat in Congress. He is a member of the Naval Affairs Committee and is an expert on demurrage and storage tariff.

The State motto is "Union, Justice and Confidence," sensibly expressed in English. The magnolia, that showy tropical tree with its glossy ever-green leaves and exotic cream-white fragrant blossoms, is the State flower.

Most Interesting City.

New Orleans, "America's Most Interesting City," is also one of the world's leading seaports. Its population is now more than a half million, having had 494,000 in 1930. Its Old World charm is a lure for thousands of tourists annually.

New Orleans opened its new industrial canal to navigation in 1923. It connects the Mississippi River and Lake Pontchartrain, to the north, which is not a lake, but an arm of the Gulf of Mexico. The industrial canal is 5½ miles long and makes available 96,000 acres of harbor space in addition to the many miles of yet unused river frontage.

Much through passenger traffic to and from the Pacific Coast passes through New Orleans, the southern transcontinental route being known as the "all-year" route.

Agriculturally Louisiana is prolific—rice, cotton, sugar cane, corn, sweet potatoes, tobacco and fine fruits are grown on its rich soil. The sugar industry is valued at $200,000,000, with an annual production of more than 3,000,000 short tons. The rice harvest annually averages 16,500,000 bushels.

Louisiana ranks fifth in petroleum output. Some of the world's richest sulphur beds are in the State.

Tulane University, Louisiana State University and Loyola University rank with America's best institutions of higher learning. The State annually spends more than $25,000,000 on its public school system.

SHARE in a fortune of more than a hundred million dollars is sought by a Federal employe, Irvin M. Carbalan y Vasquez, a native of New Orleans, who is now with the Patent Office.

Mr. Carbalan's claim is being pushed through the Louisiana and Texas Senators and the State Department for a large tract of land in Havana, part of which the Capitol of Cuba is said to occupy. According to Mr. Carbalan's records, the land was granted to his ancestor, Don Medrano Corbera de Ortega, in 1718.

The heirs hold that their claim is valid under the laws of Cuba and the treaty between Spain and the United States.

Between trips to New Orleans, Washington and Havana in the interest of the colossal estate in Cuba, young Carbalan's father is a supervising artist in a Hollywood studio.

His relatives have been planters and judges in the State since the Louisiana Purchase. Miss Therese Arceneaux, of Eunice, is a member of a distinguished French family. Rehoboth Beach, Del., June 19 (Spl.).—The combination of Western drought conditions and local rains promise great benefits for Delaware farmers.

150 Children Happy at D. C. Health Camp

Enlarged Facilities Help District's Fight on Tuberculosis.

Beyond them beams a benevolent, healing sun.

Through them, into the sun and wind, scamper 150 children, menaced by the white plague in its first, insidious stages.

Pale, tired faces and white, bare limbs rapidly are becoming bronzed in the gusty out-of-doors.

Listless eyes sparkle once more as the youngsters, who have been assigned to the camp for the summer, battle for health under the guidance of experts from the District and the Tuberculosis Association of the District.

Facilities Expanded.

Facilities this year are more complete than ever before, because the Board of Education has permitted the Allison Health School, adjacent to the camp site, to be used as a base of operations.

In it nightly sleep 100 children, while the camp accommodates 50. White children are quartered in the school building, and colored children in the camp.

Titular head of the school, Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, executive secretary of the Tuberculosis Association of the District, is devoting much of her time to supervising the camp this year. The consolidation of the Allison School and camp is largely her plan.

She was aided by the cooperation of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

Children who have applied for treatment are selected carefully. They are, Mrs. Grant explains, children who have definite tubercular tendencies. The disease, however, has not yet become communicable or really active.

Seek to Curb Disease.

The purpose of the camp, which was founded 20 years ago, is to prevent the spread of the disease and effect a cure before the little victims, who range from 3½ to 10 years in age, have become actively infected.

Beyond the khaki tents, which rise in military rows away from the pleasant play court of the Allison School, looms the Municipal Tuberculosis Hospital, a somber warning in a city whose death rate from tuberculosis is the fourth highest of any American municipality.

"We are a barrier between the children and that," explained Mrs. Grant yesterday. "The more children we care for, the more our facilities expand, the fewer will be the patients who will lie on the cots of the hospital some day."

Within the pleasant children's city voices laugh, shout and cheer as games go on with big balls bouncing and miniature pool balls clicking. Beyond, in the hospital, it is different.

A staff of about 25 operates the camp. There are seven dietitians and dietitians' assistants, furnished by the District, and six cooks. Eight councilors aid the superintendent, Miss Margaret O'Brien. There are two watchmen.

Costs $20,000 Annually.

Estimated cost of upkeep is $20,000 per summer. Most of this is raised by the Tuberculosis Association in its Christmas seal sales. The District has helped out this year. There have been 250 applications filed so far, and only 150 may be accommodated.

When first it was founded 20 years ago, the camp was for undernourished and underprivileged children. The tuberculosis rate, rising rapidly, caused the camp to be given over to tuberculosis children ten years ago.

The routine consists of rising at 7 a. m., breakfasting, resting, dinner, story-telling, more resting, games, supper, sun-baths and bed.

The camp will open officially July 1, but the children already are on the grounds.

Police Hold Youth Dillinger Gave Ride

Prisoner Reports Outlaw Accompanied by Blonde.

Madison, Wis., June 19 (AP).—An 18-year-old youth with a revolver wired to his leg, who gave his name as William Jones, of Fort Smith, Ark., and said he had been picked up by John Dillinger at Watertown, Saturday, was taken into custody by police today.

Police said Jones told a story of being picked up by Dillinger, whom he had known previously, and driven to Portage, where Dillinger gave him $5 and departed.

The youth said in addition to himself and Dillinger, there was a blonde woman and two men in the automobile. A second car carrying Dillinger associates followed.

Lehman Last Hope Of Doomed Mother In Love Triangle

Albany, N. Y., June 19 (U.P.). While a 28-year-old Albany mother sewed in Sing Sing Prison's death house for her three young children, Defense Counsel prepared tonight to appeal to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to save her from the electric chair.

Unless the Governor commutes Mrs. Anna Antonio's death sentence to life imprisonment, she will be electrocuted this week for slaying her husband, Salvatore. Mrs. Antonio, police said, hired two men to kill him so she could marry another man.

Should Lehman decline to intervene, Mrs. Antonio will be the first woman electrocuted in New York State since Mrs. Ruth Snyder was put to death with Judd Gray in 1928 for slaying Mrs. Snyder's husband.

Bishop of Arctic Starts Last Trip

Prelate Uses Airplane and Dogs to Spread Word.

Seattle, June 19 (AP).—Peter Trimble Rowe, 78, "Bishop of the Aurora Borealis," left here today on his last visit to the most remote portions of Alaska—a territory to which he has taken the gospel by dogteam and airplane for 39 years.

"I have taken the gospel to Alaska ever since before the gold rush days," said the aged but hale and sunburned missionary bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church "preaching in dance halls, saloons and igloos, and this will be the last time, probably, that I can see my eskimos and Indians in the more remote sections of Alaska.

"With the airplane I can save time and visit places that I can not reach by dogteam. This time I go to such places as Aklavik and other isolated spots that missionaries rarely reach."

Field Marital Rift Reported Nearing

Merchant's Heir, Wife, Keep Separate Homes.

New York, June 19 (AP).—The New York American says a marital breach is impending between the Marshall Fields.

Whether the rift, for the present represented merely by separate residences maintained by the heir to the Field mercantile fortune and the former Mrs. Dudley Coats, will lead to Reno, the American says, is not yet certain.

Mrs. Field is the daughter of the late Mrs. "Willie" James, described by the American as one of the famous Edwardian hostesses in England.

PWA Rejects Housing Plan for Stockyards

Secretary Ickes told reporters yesterday the Public Works Administration would not authorize a low cost housing project in the area razed by the Chicago stockyard fire, the Associated Press reported.

Robertson Urges Recovery Spirit

Harrisonburg, Va., June 19 (Spl.). All citizens must do their part toward bringing about a permanent recovery in this country because the antidepression legislation passed by Congress can not accomplish it alone, Representative A. Willis Robertson, of the Seventh Virginia District, declared here tonight en route to his home at Lexington from Washington.

"Legislation and appropriations have been passed which have brought about an improvement in general conditions," said Representative Robertson. "We now hope the laws passed will be properly administered, and the money appropriated will be properly expended. Assuming both of these results will be accomplished, we still will have no permanent recovery without the fullest cooperation on the part of all citizens. A large element of our population must look more to their own efforts and less to the Government for help."

Krol Refused Error Writ in Fraud Appeal

Former Wool Official Must Serve Embezzlement Term, Court Says.

Winchester, Va., June 19 (Spl.).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, sitting at Wytheville, today refused a writ of error to Max Krol, local woolen mill official found guilty of embezzlement of company funds, according to word received by his attorney, Harry R. Kern, of this city.

Krol, former treasurer and general selling agent of the now defunct Arthur G. Jones Woolen Co. here, was found guilty last winter on an indictment alleging the embezzlement of $4,412.32 from the firm. He was sentenced to six years in the State Penitentiary. Shortly after he was found guilty, Krol was admitted to $5,000 cash bail pending decision by the appellate court.

At present Krol is reported to be undergoing treatment in a Chicago hospital. His bond expires in corporation court here tomorrow and he is supposed to appear to be taken into custody to begin serving his prison term.

The refusal of a writ of error in the Krol case writes "finis" to a chapter in the business history of Winchester which extended over a decade. It was early in 1924 that Krol and his partner, Arthur G. Jones, of Fairmont, W. Va., came to Winchester and established the woolen mill bearing the name of the latter. In 1929, a stockholders' protective committee made an audit of the books, with the result both Krol and Jones were indicted for embezzlement. Jones was arrested, stood trial and drew a term of three years in prison, which he has finished serving.

Krol was not apprehended until January, 1933, at Long Beach, L. I. He subsequently forfeited a $5,000 bail while Gov. Lehman was considering extradition to Virginia. Arrested some months later in Chicago by representatives of a surety company, Krol was turned over to Virginia authorities.

Soon after Krol and Jones were indicted in 1929, the woolen mill went into receivership, then bankruptcy, and was subsequently sold at auction. The stockholders lost when the sale price failed to pay creditors.

Mr. Wine expects an attendance of 500 millers from South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, the District of Columbia and eastern Tennessee. This is the territory embraced by the Piedmont Association.

Bigamy Charge Fails At Danville Hearing

Danville, Va., June 19 (Spl.).—The Christian name of a woman, "Tildie," figured today in the police court trial of Ralph Walker, arrested here on a bigamy charge several days ago, and the accused went free because the State was unable to prove that he had a living wife at the time he married Minnie Brown, who is being held for grand jury action as a bigamist.

Commonwealth's Attorney George Bendall endeavored to trace the name of the suspected first wife, but at neither Mrs. Brown nor the defendant would testify he was unable to prove the charge.

Man Sought in Theft Of Hotel Guest's $60

Winchester, Va., June 19 (Spl.).—Winchester police today were searching for a colored man believed responsible for the theft of $60 from the trousers of George Graham Blair, of New York City, in a local hotel.

According to information furnished police by hotel officials, Blair missed the money while sleeping in an unlocked room. Hotel employes reported that they had seen a colored man dressed in a waiter's uniform on the upper floors of the hostelry.

To Investigate Closed Bank.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WALTER HAMPDEN, distinguished American actor-producer, will be heard in a dramatic scene from the famous play, "Richelieu."

Columbia makes this simple announcement. Actually the radio appearance of one of our most vivid actors should be taken with considerable excitement. Hampden will enact an episode form the Bulwer-Lytton drama, replete with red plush, sinister intrigue and much scraping of dueling rapiers. C. B. S. networks will carry it Sunday, June 24, at 8 p. m.

Hampden is credited with some of the finest acting of the present generation. That's why we said excitement. Though he has toured the boards in pristine style, enduring the rigors of draughty "opry houses" and an unappureciative public, he remains, through his sensitive personality and knowledge of the theater, one of the finest and most satisfying actors that ever waved a gesture or intoned King Lear.

Widely known for his productions of Shakespeare and Ibsen, he has revived such pieces as "The Admiral Crichton," "Caponsacchi," "The Immortal Thief" and "Cyrano de Bergerac."

Sunday you will thrill at his gentle but vibrant tones, his restrained and delicately shaded interpretation of France's wily old Cardinal Richelieu. Readers of "The Three Musketeers" know the Cardinal. Hampden will show him in an even more choice situation—subtle plot, fervent romance, gallant death—ah! the stage, the good old boards. You'll enjoy it.

GEORGE JESSEL (his faithful stooge—a telephone)—"It's a funny thing about those telephone conversations I hold with Ma. They started as a regular gag . . . now they've brought us closer together than any other factor. My mother isn't at all like the radio fan's picture of her. If she hears I said this she'll spank her Georgie."

Pedro de Cordoba (the Friendly Philosopher)—"One of the most interesting features of radio to me is the intimate and familar relation that seems to be maintained with each listener."

George Burns (he and Gracie)—"The real reason Gracie and I are going to Europe is so Gracie can wear clothes she's just bought with the money we're going to make the year after we get back."

Muriel Wilson (soprano with "Lavender and Lace" series)—"I find that people's taste in music is reverting to the old fashioned ballad."

Courtenay Savage (director of Columbia's continuity and dramatic department)—"There is a myth that 'microphone technic' is a fearsome art to be mastered only after assiduous labors and a great deal of hocus pocus from the control room. Perhaps the actor should sneak up on the unsuspecting microphone, or flirt with it mildly, or gauge his distance with a slide rule.

"This is all nonsense. For capable actors and actresses with desirable vocal qualities, microphone technic doesn't exist. Dramatic success on the radio does not depend upon slavish obedience to mysterious rules."

SHE'S listed as "Piano Club," merely one of N. B. C.'s Wednesday sustaining spots. Tuning in WMAL at 3:30 p. m., listeners hear finely executed keyboard selections—spirited, classical.

But to many people, unappreciative anyway of such music, the program heard at this hour remains just "another piano recital." They assiduously avoid and radio editors usually view with disdain so modest an offering.

Mme. Marie Von Unschuld's Piano Club is, definitely, something finer than a mere program. Listeners only hear. They neither see nor appreciate, we fear, the serious and really inspired effort nursed by love of music that actuates the fingers of Mme. Von Unschuld.

Middle-aged, modest, she is also ingenious. Recently she added orchestral accompaniment played on a studio record to her own piano numbers. The effect is startling—sounds like a full orchestral ensemble.

But attaining smoothness, synchronization, tempo, pitch, volume, was extremely difficult. Obtaining exact arrangements was a problem. Careful experimentation brought results. The Madame beamed. She had actually invented a new manner of piano presentation.

The success of her idea was aided, too, by the announcer who regulated the transcription machine. He tones the record, brings out the bass, softens the brass or strengthens the piano part. The result: a better program and more important, it aids students unable to obtain orchestral accompaniment in balancing their piano technique.

Judge Ponders Crash Verdict

"Everything Went Blank," Says Accused Driver of Wrecked Bus.

Reckless driving charges against Sherman N. Redmiles, 23, driver of a Capital Transit Co. bus which was wrecked Monday on Bladensburg road northeast, were under consideration by Judge Ralph Given last night following a two-hour Police Court hearing.

Redmiles denied responsibility for the crash, in which four passengers, two of them children, were bruised. Witnesses testified that something was "apparently wrong" with the bus driver. The vehicle, passengers said, suddenly swerved onto the sidewalk, struck a tree, careened across the thoroughfare and, after plowing over a 3-foot dirt mound, crashed into a gas station floodlight pole.

The bus driver said "everything went blank." He told the court he failed to remember anything until he reached the Ninth Precinct Police Station. He denied telling a policeman he fell asleep.

Carl Lisher, 35, of 2211 Channing street northeast, a passenger, told of his attempt to save two small boys from injury. The boys, Jesse and Calvin Foster, 12 and 14, respectively, were on the seat in front of him. Calvin was hurled through a hole torn in the side of the bus when it hit the tree.

Lisher said he grabbed for the boy, but was thrown to the floor. Calvin escaped injury.

Judge Given announced he would reserve a verdict.

Strange as it seems, the little girl who was later to become Queen Victoria of Great Britain did not know that one day she would rule the greatest empire on earth until this fact became known to her as she studied the history of her country. When she realized for the first time what was in store for her she simply said, "I will be good."

Victoria became queen 97 years ago today. She was not a direct descendant of her predecessor, William IV, who died in 1837 after a reign of seven years. She was his niece; daughter of Edward, Duke of Kent, and granddaughter of George III. The Duke of Kent was George III's fourth son. Victoria's mother was Princess Victoria Mary Louisa of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

Her childhood was strictly supervised. Until she became queen she was never away from her mother, and during that time no adult person was allowed to speak to her unless her mother, Duchess of Kent, or her governess, Fraulein (later Baroness) Lehzen, were present. Thus it was that she had no chance to learn, except as they chose to tell her, just what her position in life was to be.

Leopold, uncle of Victoria and later first king of the Belgians, favored the plan of keeping Victoria in ignorance of her position as long as possible. Not until she was 12 years old did she learn, through a carefully planned history lesson, that she was heir to the throne. Six years later she became queen.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Plenty to Do at Lake Bettie

For days and days after the boys got back to the mountains, there was a mighty lot to do; but they were all in a good humor and didn't mind working. Bettie was happy because she had her new coat, and then there were plenty of things to eat besides rabbits and she didn't have to get any more rabbit fur in her nose. She had more things to cook than she had ever thought of, and she and Grandma were busy and happy in the kitchen all day. And there was certainly plenty for Blackie and the rest of the boys to do.

On that first day after they got home they had just stuck things together any sort of way, but now they were busy fixing a nice place for the bee gum; building a good chicken house that would keep the rain and snow off the chickens; making a shelter over the potato hill and doing a dozen other things. Everybody worked so hard all day they were tired enough to go to sleep when night came, and so there wasn't much smoking and story telling. But after a week or so things were pretty well settled and then there wasn't so much work to do. Then they were all ready for some more frolics, storytell or anything.

Bettie had just given them all a good supper and they were having a good time with their pipes, when Jay Bird came fluttering in and said that things were getting too quiet for him, and he was thinking of flying back down to Bear Creek for a day or two to see how Mr. Man and Uncle Joe were getting along.

You know Jay Bird is the most restless fellow in the world. You never saw him sit still for a minute. He just has to be going somewhere or doing something all the time. If he ever had stayed still for five minutes Dr. Coon would have gone for his medicine chest, for he would have been sure that Jay Bird was sick. So they all knew that there was no use arguing with him when he wanted to go somewhere, and, besides, all of them would like to know how things were going down on the creek. They wanted to know what Mr. Man and Uncle Joe were doing about catching Blackie Bear and his friends, and if Rover Dog's puppy had learned to make as much noise as Howler.

Then it was settled that Jay Bird would leave the next morning, and Bettie said she would get up and fix his breakfast early. They all sat for a while longer and talked about how easy it was to fool Mr. Man and Uncle Joe; and the dogs just had to laugh about that big Sunday dinner that Mr. Man had given them. After a little more chatting and smoking they knocked the ashes out of their pipes and went to bed.

"Yes, of course, it's Lifetime Porcelain...

Ours is a Frigidaire '34"

HERE IS A FRIGIDAIRE THAT USES LESS CURRENT THAN ONE ORDINARY LAMP BULB—LESS THAN ANY OTHER MAKE OF REFRIGERATOR

The Frigidaire illustrated directly above is Model Standard 434

Lifetime porcelain, inside and out—with stainless porcelain in the food compartment. No wonder everyone's talking about the Super Series Frigidaire '34, and calling it the finest refrigerator ever created by Frigidaire and General Motors engineers!

And this Frigidaire '34 makes more ice . . . holds more food . . . has a dozen other wonderful, new conveniences.

It has automatic reset defrosting; automatic ice-tray release; the new Sliding Utility Basket for eggs and small articles; and the Frigidaire Servashelf that's so convenient when rearranging things in the refrigerator.

Nor is that all! . . . double Hydrator capacity; interior lighting; faster freezing; extra room for tall bottles. And the powerful, quiet motor operates on so little current!

When you see it, you will quickly realize why the Frigidaire '34 is so popular. And you'll be surprised when you hear how amazingly easy it is to own one. We'd like to have you drop in at one of the showrooms listed below and learn the interesting details.

PLYMOUTH ANNOUNCES THE SPECIAL SIX

It's the introduction of THE SPECIAL SIX . . . and it changes the whole picture in the low-price field.

When Plymouth announces a new model, thousands of people go to see it. We urge that you take a few minutes of your time and join them.

It will pay you to do this for two reasons. One of them is the car itself . . . and the other its price.

You'll find a big car . . . a new "luxury" model . . . with all the major Engineering Features that made Plymouth famous . . . yet a 4-door Sedan costs practically the same as comparable models of the very lowest-priced cars—WITHOUT ALL THESE FEATURES!

Consider that statement. Think what it means.

It means that without spending an extra penny, you can own this Special Six with Hydraulic Brakes . . . instead of a car with ordinary brakes.

It means that your family can ride surrounded and protected by a BODY OF SAFETY-STEEL . . . instead of the ordinary composite kind.

It means that you can have the added comfort of Individual Wheel Springing and patented Floating Power engine mountings. You get all four major features without paying a penalty.

And finally it means real pride of ownership.

For here is a smart automobile . . . with the luxury features people want. And the 4-door Sedan is priced at $620 f. o. b. factory.

Today the prices of "All Three" low-priced cars are virtually the same. Don't buy blindfolded. Don't let "habit" rule your judgment. See this Plymouth Special Six at any Dodge, De Soto or Chrysler dealer.

Mexican Tenor Will Sing Here

To Be Soloist at Second of Pan American Concerts.

On Tuesday evening, June 26, the second of the series of summer concerts given annually by the Pan American Union will take place in the Aztec Gardens. A program of Latin-American music will be played by the United States Marine Band, under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson. The assisting artist will be Francisco Tortolero, lyric soprano, of Mexico.

Senor Tortolero made his debut in 1915 with the Impulsura Opera in Mexico City. From 1917 to 1923 he toured South America with the Brancale Opera Company, and subsequently appeared as soloist with Torreblanca's Mexican Tipica Orchestra and Lardo de Tojada's Orchestra on their tours of the United States. He has sung with the Chicago Civic Opera, the San Carlo Opera, and the Hippodrome Opera Company in New York.

Latin American composers to be represented on this program are: Ignacio Galeano (Honduras), Carlos Lavin (Chile), David Sequeira (Nicaragua), Miguel Sandoval (Guatemala), Gonzalo Roig (Cuba), Emilio Murillo (Colombia), Adrian Patino (Bolivia), Juan E. Gonzales (Paraguay), Pedro E. Gutierrez (Venezuela), Osman Perez Freire (Chile), Guillermo J. Gonzales, C. Fernandez, Alfonso Esparza Oteo, Eduardo Vigil y Robles and Manuel M. Ponce (Mexico).

At this concert there will be played for the first time a medley of 18 compositions by Stephen Collins Foster, arranged by Luis Guzman, native of Colombia and member of the Marine Band. Through the generosity of J. K. Lilly, of Foster Hall, Indianapolis, who wishes to acquaint the southern republics with the music of Foster, copies of this composition will be distributed by the Pan-American Union to musical organizations throughout South America.

Lack of Funds To Cut Paroles

Congress' Failure to Act Hits Liberty Chances of D.C. Prisoners.

The failure of Congress to provide funds for expansion of the personnel of the District Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole has blocked the chances of many District prisoners, who otherwise would have been eligible for parole this year, Wilbur L. La Roe, jr., a member of the board, declared yesterday.

Congress was asked for money to employ six field parole officers, to relieve the work of the one parole officer, who is charged with the responsibility of keeping contact with the 260 men now on parole.

"We can not be generous in granting parole to many prisoners this year," La Roe said, "because of the impossibility of keeping check on the released men by our one officer."

The board asked an appropriation of $13,700 to employ additional parole officers and clerks. Although there were rumors that the board might resign in protest against the refusal of Congress to provide the money, it appeared yesterday that they would try to obtain the funds at the next session.

Society Folk Scatter Afar For Summer

Homes Close for Season as Vacations Entice Owners Away.

Countess Szechenyi Will Open Vanderbilts' Newport Place.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Each day sees a few more houses in the Capital being closed for the summer, and the owners leaving for one or another of the delightful resorts that make the poor stay-at-homes wish to go also.

The Breakers, the Vanderbilt summer home at Newport which the Countess Szechenyi inherited from her mother, the late Mrs. Vanderbilt, will be opened next week, although earlier in the season it was expected that the mansion would be closed this season.

Countess Szechenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister to London, will arrive in this country next week from England, where she has been for a short stay since the death of her mother. She will be accompanied by her two youngest daughters, Nandine and Sylvia, and probably by Countess Gladys Szechenyi, an older daughter, who made her debut in Washington two winters ago when Count Szechenyi was Hungarian Minister to Washington.

Roberts Plan Visit.

Countess Gladys recently visited her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Roberts at their home here, and returned to London with her mother. The Roberts are also planning to spend some time this summer in Newport, and though the family will be in mourning and will not join in the formal entertaining, their many friends will be delighted that the miles of ocean between England and the United States does not keep the popular Szechenyi family away for too long a time.

Representative and Mrs. Low Bacon and their family will leave shortly for their home, Arlough, at Westbury, Long Island, where they will spend a part of the summer. They usually leave immediately after the adjournment of Congress if not before, but Mr. Bacon is recuperating from a serious illness, and so the family will not close the charming house on F street until he is ready to join them.

Near Arlough is the home of the senior Mrs. Robert Bacon, Old Acres, where in spite of the invasions of new land owners on Long Island, the atmosphere of a real early American homestead has been preserved. Two years ago, following her presentation at the Court of St. James, Miss Alexandra Bacon, popular young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bacon, was presented to the friends of her family at a coming-out party given by her grandmother at Old Acres.

Deb of Next Season.

This summer the elder Mrs. Bacon will introduce a younger sister of the lovely Alexandra, Miss Virginia Bacon, who will be one of the Capital debutantes next season. Miss Bacon has been abroad for a year, and has only recently rejoined her family. A still younger sister, Martha, who has been pursuing her studies at Foxcroft School, near Middleburg, Va., has also joined the family group.

Miss Cynthia and Miss Helen Davis, daughters of Mr. Wright F. Davis, former Secretary of War, have been making their home at the Anchorage for the past few days, and will remain there until about July 1, when they sail for Europe to visit their brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Makins in Oslo, Norway. The Davis house in Georgetown is being occupied this summer by Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, jr., and the family has been there only briefly since the marriage of Mr. Makins and Miss Alice Davis in April. Mr. Makins is Second Secretary of the British Legation in Oslo, and with his bride is making his home at Oslo.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold will close their house on Massachusetts avenue within the next few days and will go to their summer camp in the Adirondacks. But not so with their energetic, young daughter, Miss Nancy Newbold, who is keeping her job with the NRA and so has little time for frivolous summer vacations. Miss Newbold and Miss Slyvia Thompson have taken the home of Mrs. Cresson Newbold at 1733 Nineteenth street for the summer, and will continue in the roles of working girls.

Tough Luck.

When a player holds a six-card suit headed by the Ace-King-Queen, guarded Kings in two other suits and a King-Queen combination in the fourth, about the best luck he could hope for after an opponent has opened the bidding is to have the other side reach a contract of three notrump, particularly if they are vulnerable. An inspection of such a hand as

♠ K Q
♡ K 5 4
◇ A K Q 8 3 2
♣ K 5

would convince any Contract player that the penalty to be suffered by the ambitious Declarer is likely to be impressive and calculated to curb an adverse propensity to overbid. Thus reasoned my friend, Mr. Albert H. Morehead, Technical Editor of The Bridge World, when East dealt the hand below:

East, Dealer
East and West vulnerable

	♠ 9 6 4 3 ♡ 9 6 ◇ 6 5 ♣ 9 7 4 3 2
♠ J 10 7 5 2 ♡ A 10 8 3 2 ◇ 9 ♣ 10 6	N W E S	♠ A 8 ♡ Q J 7 ◇ J 10 7 4 ♣ A Q J 8
	♠ K Q ♡ K 5 4 ◇ A K Q 8 3 2 ♣ K 5

Mr. Morehead.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North
1◇(1)	Pass(2)	1♠	Pass
2♣(3)	Pass(4)	2♡(5)	Pass
2NT(6)	Pass	3NT(7)	Pass
Pass	Dbl.(8)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—A superrefinement of the Approach principle. Exactly why East bid diamonds in preference to clubs is not apparent.
2—South decides to await developments.
3—East now makes the bid which he should have made as an Opening bid.
4—Not so well satisfied with the course the hand is taking, but continuing the policy of "watchful waiting."
5—Disclosing another five-card suit.
6—East believes that notrump is the safest contract.
7—Certainly courageous enough.
8—The Double comes as a matter of course.

This should be a story of undue boldness punished, but as a matter of fact it did not turn out that way. East, instead of being penalized for his temerity, fulfilled his contract. Mr. Morehead led the three high diamonds in turn, and then cleared the diamond suit. East winning the fourth diamond with the Jack. The Queen of hearts was then successfully finessed, and while five heart tricks were taken Mr. Morehead was forced to find two discards. In making his choice he found it necessary to part with his two established diamonds. A small spade was then led, which was won with the Ace, and Mr. Morehead was put in the lead with the remaining spade to lead up to the club Ace-Queen for the winning tricks.

Frayed Cuffs Reveal Thrift Of Senators

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT SEEMS that Senators aren't half as extravagant as they're cracked up to be.

That's the verdict of a jolly little lady who sits by her window all day long and mends and mends and mends. She doesnt get out very often to meet people, but why should she? Her list of callers includes many distinguished names. And, thanks to her ability to turn shirt collars and cuffs so the frayed edges won't show, and shorten long shirt sleeves, half the eligible young bachelors in Washington and several United States Senators drop by to see her every week or so.

Maybe that's why the women started coming, too. Or maybe they heard she was both seamstress and designer for one of New York's leading dress houses for 13 years. At any rate, they've discovered that no matter how much a dress bulges in the wrong place or how unevenly it hangs, she'll straighten it out in no time, and charge about half the usual price.

She is particularly valuable to women who have difficulty buying ready-made clothes to fit.

• • • •

Eyelash Grooming.

It isn't true at all, that old story about eyelashes being shorter in the summer time. They only look shorter, because the sun tends to bleach them, and perhaps dry them out. They break off or fall out more readily than in winter.

A certain eyelash grower is a good ounce of prevention. It's a clear, amber-colored "salve" that comes in a little round jar with a good lash brush in a celluloid case.

Rub a dab of it on the lashes before going out in the sun.

• • • •

A Gift For the Groom.

The June bride has enjoyed lots of publicity, but what of the blushing groom? He's entitled to a little consideration—and he's getting it at a downtown store, where the men's department has a whole table of cool crepe robes, which come with a pair of slippers to match, and a little bag to hold them both, complete for $1.95.

There are plain colors and stripes in a variety of colors. Tans, blues, and grays predominate.

• • • •

Helmets for Golfers.

Another store has turned its attention to the summer golfer. While the golf helmets do look like the prize items in a big game hunter's wardrobe, they're destined to appear in considerable numbers here. Some are white straw fiber, with half a dozen airholes. Others are cork, covered with a tan fabric. The inside band stands just away from the hat, allowing for swelled heads and no end of comfort.

The golfer who seeks protection from the sun in one of these helmets is going to find it. The brim will protect his eyes, and the cork will stave off the heat. So, whether it's African bound or merely a-golfing we go, don't fail to carry along a helmet.

• • • •

Evening Wraps.

The summer evening wrap problem is no problem at all after one visits the neckwear department in a local shop. What an assortment is here. Capes, large and small, capes net, capes lace, capes taffeta. And capes in combinations of all these.

One outstanding model is flame lace. It literally drapes itself around the shoulders. An accordion pleated net is positively billowy. A certain sky blue taffeta with lace lining and inserts spells style in a cape way.

• • • •

Efficient Shampoo.

Pure olive and coconut oils combined, plus a little of this and a little of that (only the chemists know) makes a fine shampoo for dry hair. It comes in beautifully shaped dark bottles.

When the hair is wet with warm water a few drops of the shampoo will make a penetrating lather. Then three, four or five rinses, if patience permits. Dry again, the hair has a lovely sheen.

The same shampoo comes in soapless form which, rubbed well into the scalp, does not lather, but cleans beautifully.

• • • •

Sweater-Beret Sets.

Cotton knit sweaters and berets to match are—one dollar for both! This unusual buy may be found in a downtown store. The white ones are going right and left. But whoever pleases may buy them in navy blue, light blue, gold or peach.

• • • •

Sandwich Tray.

A Connecticut avenue shop which has more expensive things than inexpensive ones, has a tantalizing teaser now for economical customers. It's a chrome sandwich tray. Round, dish shaped, and bright as a mirror. An almost invisible etched rim is the only decoration. The price, $1.

World-Famous Spanish Vintner Tells How Champagne Is Made

Scion of Codorniu Family, Noted Since 1551, Visits Here.

By Katherine Smith.

THE making of Codorniu champagnes is an industry that has been controlled by the same Spanish family for more than 400 years. In 1551, when this country was little more than a dream, the Codornius were wine makers. Today the Raventos carry on the industry that has been handed down from generation to generation.

Jesus Raventos, who is in this country as representative of the organization, is one of eight members of the family firm. In his room at the Ambassador Hotel he told of the history of the industry and the making of champagnes.

"The name, Codorniu, changed in the middle of the seventeenth century. One of my ancestors had only one daughter, who married a Raventos, also a wine maker. That was the only change of name. Now there are four brothers and four sisters managing the business.

"The making of wine is in our blood. We have the family spirit, the ancient tradition, and we love the industry, not for commercial reasons but for the tradition itself.

Family Records Lost.

"Of the first Codornius we know little. Wars and destructions of time have taken away almost all documents. The earliest record is an old inventory written on stained and faded foolscap. It is dated March 19, 1578. It was about that time that the champagne industry started.

"Now our plant near Barcelona covers about 28 square miles. It includes the factory, vineyards, woods from which we make our kegs. We have our own railroad station, Raymat. We make our own corks, about 12,000 a day.

"This is the way champagne is made. Grapes, white and red, are hand-picked and hand-selected. Three hundred women remove all bad ones and only perfect grapes are pressed in nine hydraulic presses. Each press does the work of five or six ordinary ones. We have invented these, the only kind of this type in the world. These nine will do the work of about 48 smaller ones.

"The juice obtained is kept in barrels in a cellar for a year. Then it is drawn, a little old wine is mixed with the young, and it is bottled. Fermentation sets in in about five days. The wine is kept at least five years, often more.

A Place in History.

"Every three months the bottles are moved by hand. This prevents the fermentation from settling in one place. During the last five or six months it is necessary to move the bottles every day.

"Then the old corks are withdrawn, taking with them the sediment formed during the years of maturation, and another cork, a permanent one, is put in its place.

"Before the final cork is placed, however, a small amount of old wine is added. According to the kind of wine, the product will be sweet or dry.

"No filters are used, but the wine is clear." He smiled and his blue eyes gleamed. "For centuries Spanish writers have spoken of our wine. They say it is not a wine, it is a masterpiece!"

But Mr. Raventos does more than make champagne. He is a wine collector, among other things.

"I want to have, eventually, the finest and most complete private cellar in the world. I have started collecting Spanish wines, the best vintages of every selection. I collect champagne glasses, too. Only a few I have now, but I hope to get more."

Triple Sheer Material Solves Coat Problem

Light-as-Breeze Garment Ends Indecision on Summer Wear.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Hot weather problem: what to do when you don't feel comfortable—mentally—without a coat and don't feel comfortable—physically—with one.

Answer: wear one. But wear one of those sheer or light-as-a-breeze silks or wools. You'll hardly feel it—physically—and you'll feel right mentally.

Triple sheers are lightest of the light. (You've probably had a triple sheer evening dress so you know that while it has body enough to hang well it has no weight or warmth).

Airy Taffeta.

Taffeta, which has staged such a comeback this spring and summer, is used for coats. And it has an airy, floating quality which seems to lift it right off your shoulders. Silk crepes, too, are just about as light.

Then there are very light weight and sheer wools in crepe, matelasse, diagonal and ribbed weaves . . . just as light as these sheer wools you've worn in dresses.

The majority of these light-in-weight summer coats are dark in color—black, navy blue or brown. That, plus their materials, gives them a certain formality so you can wear them many places where a sports coat wouldn't fit in.

There are also some in biege and other lighter colors. But for general, all-round use, the darker colors are preferable.

Some Are Lined.

Some of the coats are lined. For instance, the one sketched is sheer crepe lined with taffeta, the taffeta showing on the turned back lapels.

Some are reversible. That is, they are lined and finished off so they may be worn either side out.

Two-color combinations are occasionally used in the reversible coats, so they really make two coats in one. Brown-with-beige lining, black-and-beige, navy blue-and-lighter blue are favorite combinations.

As in the case of most of the summer coats, swagger lines and lengths . . . about three-quarters . . . are predominate. They may be plain swaggers or finished off with a scarf neckline or a high side closing. Sleeves are long with an inclination toward slight fullness.

Feminine Treatments.

The simpler the coat, the more places it can go, of course. But some get quite feminine and dressy looking with softly fitted waistlines tying at the side, three-quarter length cape sleeves, pleated ruffles, rippling jabot rever treatments and satin trimming.

You'll see these coats on the street wherever you see well-groomed women. And at teas and cocktail parties and many, many places in the evening.

Coats of the type described are available in Washington in all the better ladies' wearing apparel shops and department stores.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

Salad, Now a Dinner Dish, Served for Years as Breakfast Food.

ONCE upon a time it was considered important and almost necessary to serve a salad for breakfast. Ham and bacon were served too, the drippings obtained from these breakfast meats was poured while still hot over mustard greens and home-grown lettuce.

That was in Godey's Lady's Book days. Today the salad has moved forward into the luncheon or dinner menu, but it is still considered important and almost necessary in the diet.

We have overcome another antique and somewhat quaint idea. A salad and its dressing are eaten as a whole, not as two separate items as they used to be.

But if one serves a salad as a main course it should be substantial, and if it is served with the thermometer about to burst, it should be cool.

Southern Special.

One delightful main dish salad is so-called Southern Special.

Marinate one cup of diced cooked ham in French dressing for an hour. Drain and combine with one cup of chopped cabbage and one cup of shredded pineapple. Blend with mayonnaise and serve on a slice of head lettuce. This is excellent with toasted sandwiches as a luncheon dish.

A vegetable salad is generally nice to serve with cold meat sandwiches at noon. There is one that can be made early in the morning while the morning is still cool and served at will when the noon hour approaches.

Beet and Carrot Salad.

Line mold with slices of pickled beets or beets allowed to soak in vinegar. Shred coarsely ½ cup of raw carrots, add 1 tablespoon of finely grated onion and ½ cup of finely minced celery. Make lemon gelatin, using 1½ cups of hot water and ½ cup of vinegar and 1 teaspoon of salt. Mix with carrots, pour in mold and set. Serve with French or Russian dressing.

Ham can be combined with cheese and fruit to make a delightful, pleasing salad. Here is a suggestion for you:

Mix equal parts of ground cooked ham and creamed American cheese. Blend with mayonnaise and shape into small balls. Roll these in finely chopped pecan meats.

Serve a ball on half of a peach, which has been placed on a bed of lettuce. Top with mayonnaise. Garnish with paprika. For variety you may enjoy using halves of apricots or rings of pineapple instead of peaches. Hot corn sticks made a nice accompaniment to this salad.

How to Keep Well

What Is Infection?

In spite of all our care bacteria that produce disease may gain access to the tissues of the body and in some instances may reach the bloodstream. The body is provided with many defenses against bacterial invasion. For example, bacteria are rarey able to pass through the skin unless there is a break in this protective layer such as a scratch or a wound. Should a finger be scratched bacteria may be introduced beneath the skin, and as a result a defense barrier is established in the resulting inflammation. There is usually swelling and soreness of the part infected, and the body sends out an alarm to the white cells of the blood, known as leucocytes.

These white cells congregate in the inflamed area and consume and destroy the bacteria found there. This frequently leads to the formation of pus that may require surgical drainage. If the infection can be confined to a small area it is said to be local and not general—that is, that the bacteria have not gained entrance to the bloodstream. In such cases blood poisoning, as we understand the term, does not result.

Careful attention to minor scratches and wounds has saved many lives. The wounded area should be thoroughly cleansed with soap and water and some local antiseptic applied. Heat should be used by immersing the part in water as hot as can be borne or by applying clean cloths wrung out of hot water. This application should be continued for 30 minutes or more and may be reported at intervals of one to two hours if the pain and swelling persist. Should the inflammation show signs of spreading no time should be lost in consulting a physician. Lockjaw must be guarded against through the use of antitetanic serum. Wounds should never be sealed through the application of collodion or ointments, but should be covered with sterile gauze.

Bacteria may also gain entrance to the body through the mucous membrane of the nose and throat. This mucous membrane is richly supplied with blood vessels and is not so resistant to the entrance of bateria as is the skin.

What Today Means

"Gemini."

If June 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

On this date great care should be exercised in the transmission of messages, either written or telephoned. Misunderstandings and mix-ups are due to happen through carlessness. If you exercise the proper care in matters you are handling, you can avoid becoming involved in any such mastakes. In some lines business will show a great deal of activity, and competition will be keen.

If a woman, and June 20 is your natal day, your energetic restless nature may very shortly find a satisfying outlet for its surplus energy, with gratifying monetary results. A professional career either in the field of art or commerce, might probably prove more satisfactory than the duties and cares of a housewife. Your love for varying experiences may cause you to overlook opportunities that are right now presenting themselves, if you only open your eyes to them. Remember "the other fellow's field always looks greener." Do not marry until you are perfectly satisfied to settle down in one place, and are willing to "stay put" for the balance of your life.

The child born on June 20, as it grows up, should be encouraged to join the Boy or Girl Scouts, or some similar organization that indulges in out-of-door hikes and sports, for it will have a nature that craves this sort of activity. It will be perfectly normal in all respects, and lovable. Lessons on how to concentrate will not be amiss.

If a man, and born on June 20, you have an unusually good mentality, but your versatility may prove detrimental to your success, unless you learn to concentrate your efforts. It is the man who specializes today that meets with the greatest success, and if you will do this, you will have splendid results in time.

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche

Gerald Gerrish has loaned money to Martha Blaisdell, on her own securities, and spread the rumor that he is supporting her. When she discovers it, she orders him to sell everything she owns and take what she owes him. Resentful, he brings suit against her, charging the money was advanced on promise to marry him. Meanwhile Martha has become engaged to Herbert Cranston, wealthy explorer home for a holiday; his sister, Letty, investigates Martha's past and is far from satisfied to have her brother marry a girl whose name is besmirched by scandal. Also in love with Martha is Dr. Peter V. Baxter.

SIM pursed his lips.

"Doesn't sound like you, Letty."

"What do you mean?" she demanded.

"Not to give the girl a chance for her alley. I mean, if she's right, and being given a wrong break——"

"If it were anyone in the world but Bert, I'd agree with you, Sim."

Just Chivalry.

"You're making Bert out a bit of a cad, aren't you? Can't he stick by a girl when she needs sticking by?"

"That's what I want to stop, Sim," she explained. "If he loves her—all right. He'll be unhappy, but I'll side with the girl. But if it's just chivalry——"

"You don't mean that, Letty?" said Sim, shrewdly.

She blushed, faintly.

"I guess I don't, Sim. You see, it's so hard to make even you understand. Bert will do the right thing. But I don't want him miserable doing it. To think that a Cranston's wife is gossiped about! I tell you it would embitter his whole life. Bless him, he can't help it. He isn't a snob, but—the Cranstons are—the Cranstons. There's never been a scandal——"

"By gosh, I've a darned good mind to kick one up, then," commented Sim. "Mrs. Sim Torrance, once a holy Cranston, finds husband is gang leader and rum-runner. How would he like that?"

Hope for the Best.

"He'd hate it," admitted Letty promptly. "Sim, beloved, I'm not siding with Bert. It's a weakness; maybe a grave defect in character. But he's over 30 and too old to change. I wish he were different. But he's so swell in other ways——"

"Are you telling me?" grunted Sim. "The Torrances would be on their uppers if your brother hadn't seen me through the panic. He's swell in about every way——"

"And if he has one defect—let's not despise him for it," pleaded Letty. "The grandest brother—and so I don't want him to make a marriage that will be unhappy. So I'm going to New York."

"And I don't know whether to wish you luck or not," said her husband. "Let's—let's hope for the best."

"Which is all I wanted to occur," said Letty.

That Martha Blaisdell was a designing little cat was an idea that had been pretty well dissipated in Betty's mind by a telephone talk with Trudie Lemming. Trudie Lemming's judgment of character was sound. Here, then, was a nice girl, with whom, quite obviously, Bert was in love but who unfortunately had a bad reputation.

That sounded pretty awful, but it was the truth. Mean, vindictive and trouble-loving as the Craigie and Prentiss women were, although they shook hands with scandal every time they opened their mouths, and patted libel on the back each time they wrote a letter, they were not liars. They didn't manufacture lies of whole cloth. There was a good, sound reasonable bow for every barbed and poisonous shaft they let loose.

Arrived in New York.

Well, Letty was as good a judge of character as Trudie. If the girl were all Trudie said—she might decide that it was time for Bert to get over his delusions of grandeur about the Cranstons. Anyway, there was no use thinking anymore about the matter until she reached Long Island.

She arrived at the Grand Central on Sunday morning. A wire en route to her Long Island caretaker assured the presence of a car and chauffeur, and she was looking for his familiar face when a feminine voice greeted her. She looked into the face of Dolly Oliver.

They kissed, rather cooly. Dolly was a younger edition of Sarah Prentiss, was, indeed, a niece of the stalward old backbiter.

"What on earth brings you to town, Letty?" asked Dolly.

Filled With Gossip.

"Mother," said Dolly. "Mother will summer in Lenox and I must see her every week or so. Don't look at me; I'm a wreck. Haven't been to bed. Left the Hyslops' party—I made mother see that I couldn't miss that—at 5 and motored into town. Changed my clothes and took a bath. That's all. Thank heaven I've a room on the train and can nap. And if I fall asleep during dinner mother will think I'm a good girl and keep early hours. And am I filled with gossip?"

"So?" Letty was indifferent. Her maid had found the chauffeur, her bags were being put in her car, and she healthily craved breakfast.

"I'll say so," said Dolly. "Your brother picked himself a star performer when he decided to give a girl a rush."

The Latest Story.

"Now just what does that mean?" demanded Letty. She could fear for Bert, and be alarmed by what people told her, but even the old vixens of the telephone would be put harshly in their places when Letty met them face to face.

"Where have you been? The town's alive with it. Broker named Gerrish—"

"I've heard that filthy, malicious lying tale," said Letty.

"But you can't have heard what happened last night. Oh, ten people that I know intimately heard every word. Some brute of a man gave her a summons. Mind, at 2 this morning, Sunday morning. And he screamed, so that everyone could hear, that it was a summons in a suit to recover money given her by Gerrish on her promise to marry. Imagine! Girls don't get money from men on a promise to marry—you know. She's walked out on him—she's after your brother——"

It Was an Outrage.

"Who will take care of Mr. Gerrish and his suit, I imagine," said Letty. She could visualize the unhappy girl. A girl that Bert liked. A nice girl. Trudie Lemming said so, and Trudie would know. It was an outrage, and just too bad about Bert and his finicky standards. When people began to talk about the girl to whom her brother paid attention, then it was up to her brother to pay the girl more attention. Hang it, before Bert was a—well, snob—he was surely a gentleman.

"He didn't have to. There was the divinest man there—Peter Baxter. Used to be wrestling champion—anyway, he broke Dan Treman's leg—well, he stepped right up, gave those men plenty. Said they had no right to serve a summons on Sunday morning, that they were blackmailers and he'd put them out if they didn't go, and their employer Gerrish could sue him and he'd prove everything he said."

Baxter a Hero.

She drew a long breath.

"I tell you, Dr. Baxter is a hero. Everybody is mad about him. He was grand, and everyone's going to be his patient, and give Herbie my love, won't you?"

She joined the last-minute rush to the Lenox train, and Letty thoughtfully followed her maid to the car. She asked to be driven to the Canterbury, where she ate a leisurely breakfast. Then she stepped in her car again and ordered the chauffeur to take her to Green Point, to the Lemming house.

And at precisely a quarter to 10 she brushed aside the Lemming maid and insisted on waking Trudie. She couldn't wait any longer to get more news of whatever on earth had happened last night, and about what sort of a dreadful tangle had enmeshed her brother. But, oddly, she was now pretty well disposed toward Martha.

Double Killing.

Trudie Lemming stared at the intruder. She buried her face, flushed with sleep, in her pillow, and from its depths came muffled but vehement protest.

"You go away from here, Letty Torrance. There'll be newspaper headlines tomorrow morning about the Long Island matron who slew in defense of her right to slumber."

"It will be a double killing then," giggled Letty. "If you think I've raced all the way from Bar Harbor to Long Island to watch your gentle slumbers, you're crazy. You sit right up in bed and tell me everything that a loving sister ought to be told about her brother."

"Three words will do it; mind your business," yawned Trudie.

Gossip Travels Fast.

"I'll consider them said, and you consider them ignored. Now tell me all about Martha Blaisdell, and what she is doing to Baby Bert, and what's the secret of her charm that makes other men do battle for her in the wee small hours?"

Trudie sat bolt upright, her eyes wide.

"Now, don't tell me you know about last night. You couldn't. Why, it only happened at 2 o'clock and you were on a train then." Her face showed quick apprehension. "Don't tell me it's in the morning papers."

"I met Dolly Oliver in the Grand Central."

"That explains everything," said Trudie. "Hand me a mirror, there's a darling, and some lipstick."

She busied herself for a moment with the essentials of make-up; then she rang the bell which would summon her breakfast. Settling herself more comfortably, she looked challengingly at her visitor.

In Favor of It.

"Shall I break it to you gently or by degrees?"

"I'll take it straight," said Letty. Her face paled slightly.

"If your brother hasn't proposed to Martha Blaisdell, your Aunt Trudie can no longer read the signs and portents. And I, for one, Letty am terriby in favor of it."

Letty leaned back in her chair.

"That seems pretty definite. It shows what you think of the girl."

"I told you over the telephone what I thought of her," said Trudie. "I know how you feel, Letty. I suppose if I had a brother that had fallen in love with a girl about whom there was chatter, I'd be a female Lochinvar and come dashing to the rescue. But not after I'd met Martha. She's all right, Letty, my dear."

Healthy Appetite.

"I've never really doubted that," said Letty. "It was just a matter of, well, you know Bert. I simply don't want him doing something that will make him miserable."

"Sometimes not doing a thing makes you more miserable than doing it," commented Trudie.

The maid entered with a tray, which she placed in Trudie's lap.

"Coffee?" asked Trudie.

Letty shook her head.

Her hostess drank her orange juice, poured her coffee, buttered a roll and bit it avidly.

"I should think nurses would eat all the time and weigh tons," she said. "Any time I've not had enough sleep I simply stuff myself. If the sight of a healthy woman devouring a woodchopper's breakfast is too much for you——"

Letty smiled.

Herbie Fell Hard.

"Nothing is too much for me but delay. Hustle through that breakfast and tell me everything."

Trudie drank her cup of coffee and toyed with an egg. Despite her vauntings, that lovely figure had not been achieved and maintained by overeating.

"I'll make it brief," she promised. "Last week-end Herbie met Martha here. I've never seen anything so rapid in my life. He came, he saw, she conquered. You know your baby brother. Healthy man's normal enjoyment of pretty women. That's Herbie all the years I've known him. But not so this time. If he'd carried a placard announcing in big letters that he was in love with Martha he couldn't have made it any plainer. I mean, people don't tease your brother as a general rule. The lad has too much dignity. But I promise you that everybody kidded him in a gentle way last week. It was one of those things it would have been more noticeable to ignore than not. The great Herbie Cranston, sighed over by maidens and their mammas for a dozen seasons, captured at last. And I loved it. You don't know Martha because she's lived abroad most of her life, but I've known her off and on for years. She's swell."

"It seems to me I've heard you say that before," said Letty dryly. "What I want to know is the talk about her."

Income Clerks Keep Private Lives Private

Neighbors Try to Chisel Secrets About Tax Returns, and Mattie L. McMorris Tells How Much They Don't Find Out.

THE United States, despite its twentieth century sophistication, is still a country village at heart. Men and women are as interested in their neighbors' private lives as they ever were, Miss Mattie L. McMorris, technical clerk in the Income Tax Division, is convinced.

Miss McMorris has received letters from women wanting to know how much a certain couple contributed to their mutual church. She has received letters from men, asking if business acquaintances belonged to secret organizations. And now she is sitting at her desk in the Internal Revenue Building, waiting for letters from persons who want to know how much income tax Heavyweight Champion Baer must pay on his earnings from pinching Senor Carnera last Thursday night.

Those letters, like taxes, are sure to come.

"We clerks in the rules and regulations section have learned to expect them," said Miss McMorris yesterday. "Every time anybody holds the winning number for a sweepstakes race, inherits a fortune, strikes oil in his garden patch, or invents a new type of can-opener, persons write to us and ask how much income tax that individual will have to pay."

The letters of the curious persons are answered; but not their questions.

"We are forbidden by law to give any information on income-tax returns," explained Miss McMorris. "As for the people who try to find out if their neighbors belong to certain organizations—well, if they'd ever filed income tax returns themselves, they'd know there isn't any space on the tax blank for names of clubs and secret societies."

But no matter how foolish or unreasonable the letters, all of them are answered courteously, promptly. Explanation is given for the refusal to answer questions.

Interprets Laws.

Only a small part of the technical clerk's time is spent in answering letters, however. Her real job is to interpret the income-tax law and make decisions under that law.

Then, two years ago, Miss McMorris prepared the United States' tax report for the League of Nations when that group was considering double taxation.

"Under existing laws when a corporation is incorporated in the United States, has its headquarters in England, maintains a factory in France, and sells its goods in Spain, it must pay taxes in all four countries," said Miss McMorris. "The League of Nations, in an attempt to eliminate some of this taxation, asked all countries to send reports explaining their tax systems."

Mattie McMorris had just one month in which to prepare the United States report.

Task Speeds Up.

"But I didn't know it was a rush job when I began it," she smiled. "So I began quite leisurely. Before I was through, I was working as fast as I could go."

She finished the 80 typewritten pages late in the afternoon of the day before Mitchell B. Carroll, director of the sub-committee for the League of Nations fiscal inquiry, was due to sail for Geneva in January, 1932.

It was at Mr. Carroll's request that Miss McMorris prepared the report. As former special attorney in the United States Treasury Department, under Secretaries Andrew Mellon and Ogden Mills, Mr. Carroll had often referred questions on taxation to Miss McMorris. The report for the League of Nations, which gave a complete description of our income tax system and our methods of taxing foreign and National enterprises, was no more nor no less thrilling to the woman who prepared it than her daily routine.

A Wife Checks Up.

For 20 years she has been in the Income Tax Division. Ten times within those 20 years the income tax law has been changed. That means Mattie McMorris, and the other technical clerks, must do a deal of studying.

"The work is always interesting," said Miss McMorris. "And no matter how ridiculous the letters are, they're entertaining. One woman wrote wanting to know what her husband was doing with his money. She knew he'd tell the Government on his income tax return even if he didn't tell her.

"Another woman who had been divorced wrote wanting to know when her husband had married again, and whom. But the letters dwindle in numbers every year. I guess inquisitive persons are gradually learning the Income Tax Division isn't much help in exposing private lives."

Earful for Congress.

THE National League of Women Voters, through Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, yesterday issued the following comment upon the action of the Seventy-third Congress:

"The National League of Women Voters is pleased at the international peace efforts of the Seventy-third Congress, in its ratification of the International Trade in Arms Treaty.

"The league is disappointed, however, that the Congress did not take one of the most important steps toward peace entrance of the United States into the World Court.

"The league deplores the failure of Congress to act on the Celler bill.

"The league believes that the Congress should have taken action on the Wagner-Lewis unemployment compensation bill.

"The league also deplores that Congress side-tracked the Food and Drugs bill."

Doctor Tells Possible Effect on Child.

Dr. Macalister explains this differentiation between hands in humans as the result of a superior activity of one side of the brain or the other. If the right is more active, then the person will be left-handed and vice versa.

PILLAR TO POST

House Pages Shine.

THERE is an appealing human interest story behind the gift of two volumes entitled "The Rise of American Civilization," by Charles A. Beard, to Representative Joseph B. Shannon, of Missouri, presented on the last day of Congress by the pages of the House.

It is the story of a man who lost a small son, and for whom ever after young boys everywhere have been objects of his fatherly concern. He can not pass them on the road without picking them up.

* * * *

He has paid their fines when through youthful exuberance they have got themselves arrested for speeding in their battered flivvers. He receives letters from boys all over the country to whom he has given a lift in one way or another. And ever since he has been in Congress he has given a dinner annually for the pages of the House.

* * * *

Those dinners are always merry affairs, but the last one given on the terrace of the Shoreham topped all for hilarity. Every page was required to make a speech, and the one made by Howard "Hot Shot" Ostman, a representative of the District of Columbia, was a most particular "wow."

* * * *

Representative Shannon introduced the undersized 12-year-old as the "father" of ten children. He is the oldest of ten brothers and sisters and his speech as listed on the program was "Imitation on How I Take Care of My Brothers and Sisters."

* * * *

Newt Morris, from Marietta, Ga., was the chaplain and invoked the blessing at the dinner. The pages have their own little joke about the "chaplain," declaring him to be the best poker player in the bunch. Be that as it may, Newt did confess that he found "Prayin' in public most embarrassin'."

* * * *

Compton White, the young son of the Representative from Idaho, who recently gave up his job as page to a boy whose father had died, would not have missed that dinner for anything, and he delivered a speech on "The Big Potato."

John Wells, a polished young gentleman from Winthrop, Mass., delivered an address with a strong Harvard accent. John McCabe, the chief page, did an Irish clog dance.

* * * *

The host delivered an inspiring talk, chiefly concerned with the evils of drinking and smoking. He exhorted them to eschew both until they are 25 years old, regardless of the examples set "by mothers and sisters." There was music by Bob Reilly and his Hoot Owls and on the menu there were chicken and ice cream. Atop the printed menu ran the slogan, "Every day brings us a fresh leaf, but never a fresh 'page.'"

Chortle for Doctor.

* * * *

On a recent trip to Cleveland to represent the association at the annual meeting that is held in conjunction with the American Medical Association, she contracted the mumps, and had to return home without attending any of the clinics or festivities. She is much disgusted, but trying hard to be a philosopher and is doing things about the house that she never found time for, before.

French Comtesse Finds U. S. Destitute of Dressmaking Art

LA COMTESSE de la Grandville laughed as though the remark that French women were probably the best dressed women in the world was the funniest thing she had ever heard.

Then she looked very pleased and asked, "Do you really think so?"

What causes this state of affairs so pleasant for the French and so unfortunate for the rest of the world?

"It is because of the dressmakers," La Comtesse replied airily, as if that explained everything. "Our dressmakers. They are so good. Yours——"

"My French friends I came over from Paris to visit nearly jumped in my trunks when I opened them. I say to them, if you like these dresses do keep them and have them copied. They reply it is no good because of your American dressmakers."

As to the other factors that make the French so supreme in chic, La Comtesse said, "Is it not maybe how one wears a thing, and not what one wears?" And then she looked worried, as though this might hurt the collective feelings of American women.

She tipped her head in its wide, black hat and further considered the matter, as she sat in the lobby of the Wardman Park Hotel. "About dressmakers again. You have some excellent ones, really. I didn't mean they were all, ah, not so good. But your good ones—they are so dear! Expensive, I mean. That is what you say, is is not?

"Ours do not charge us much, except the big places in Paris. And they do lovely work, such lovely work. They make dresses the way each person wants them made. So we don't look alike, all in the same models, you know."

Shorts delight the countess.

"They are so nice, aren't they? Oh, yes, I like them very well. Not for myself, for the young. The young look so pretty in them."

A pencil and paper were produced and her interviewer made a few chicken scratchings. A look of alarm crossed the lovely face of La Comtesse. "My child, what are you doing? You're not going to put in the paper what I say? Oh, my—and I have nothing interesting to tell you!"

Well, she might speak of women in France, whether they were organized or not, and if so what they did.

"No, we are not organized in clubs at all." Then as if she thought it was the required remark: "I think we should be."

P.-T. A. Test Puts Damper On Baby Talk

WHEN parents are inconsiderate enough of their children's welfare to encourage baby talk up until the age of 6 or 7 years, somebody should take the situation in hand, believes Miss Ruth A. Bottomly, secretary of the Summer Round-up of Children, a movement sponsored by the National Parent-Teacher Congress.

This baby-talking, so endearing to parents, annoying to everyone else, and detrimental to the child, is one of the things the round-up is out to correct. By fostering health examinations of all children entering kindergarten and first grades this parent-teacher project is able to check at their inception tuberculosis, defective eyesight and hearing, contagious diseases and other menaces to the health of children.

Entering school, as Miss Bottomley sees it, is the first big experience in a person's life. There are adjustments, physical and psychological, to be made and it is necessary to face these adjustments with perfect health. If perfect health is an impossibility, the next best thing, knowledge of the defects should be had.

The Parent-Teacher Association sponsors the round-up examinations and leaves it up to local health authorities and school officials to conduct them.

Whatever machinery these officials arrange for the examinations take care of indigent children free of charge. Children of families of means are urged to consult their family physicians, who, as Miss Bottomley says, after all know more about their own patients than clinic doctors.

In cases where defects are discovered but the child's parents have no funds for treatments, the local P.-T. A. units try to help or put the case before relief organizations. An eyeglass fund has flourished for the benefit of astigmatic and near-sighted indigents in one city.

Out of the 161,587 children entering school all over the country last year more than half were examined and derived great benefit, Miss Bottomley says.

College Sons Set Fashions For Fathers

WHEN A YALE or Princeton man goes home for vacation, little brother in prep school immediately imitates his clothes and even "father" eventually picks up a modified version of the style—thus are men's fashions born, I. Leonard Heuslein, advertising manager of John David, told the opening meeting of the Newspaper Advertising Executives Association recently.

It's "father's" pursuit of youth that makes him succumb to the styles worn by his collegiate son, he said.

Besides the style influence emanating from these two universities there's another factor that makes men dress the way they do. The great mass of American men follow the trends as they are demonstrated at resorts, both summer and winter. Palm Beach, Fla., and Newport, R. I., are notable in setting styles, Mr. Heuslein said.

His definition of "style" and "fashion" distinguished between the two in that style was an individual idea that might or might not become a fashion, while fashion is a generally accepted style.

Women, said Mr. Heuslein, are prone to be influenced by prevailing trends in men's clothes. But men, he said, are not influenced by women's styles at all.

Skimpy Purses Stayed Home Several Years—But Not Now!

Refreshing Ventures to Alaska and the Rockies Resolved Upon by Many This Year, Even Though They Gnaw on Rainy-Day Savings.

The lost word "vacation" is back in the summer vocabulary. On every hand workers—and for that matter, drones as well—are talking of their summer vacations. Travel agencies are looking forward to a brisk business—so are filling stations and overnight camps. The following is the second of a series of articles on feminine vacation plans.

WOMEN Government workers have become defiant about vacations. For the last two or three summers, what with slices off their salaries and the general jittery outlook on the uncertainty of existence, they hardly dared venture beyond the District limits. But this year they are really going places.

The pronounced urge for travel does not necessarily mean the women have more money than they did last summer. But it does mean they are tired of being depressed and have decided to do something about it. Realizing they may never be any richer and certainly never any younger, a great many Government employes are neglecting rainy day savings in favor of long trips within the next two or three months.

No one needs a vacation more than the woman Government worker, according to one of them, Mrs. Jesse Eliot Perez, who is employed in the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce.

Tasks Underestimated.

"Many persons think women in Government positions spend a few hours a day doing simple routine work for which they receive big fat pay-checks," said Mrs. Perez yesterday. "That certainly is an inaccurate picture. We do a great deal of hard work for which we get no credit. So do other business women. Notice the names on doors of executives' offices. Few women's names appear there, no matter how much work they do. Nor do they appear on bulletins they have assembled with much painstaking effort."

Mrs. Perez, in addition to being senior clerk in the airway bulletin office, is secretary of the Washington Business and Professional Women's Club.

The harder women work, the more they are entitled to vacations, the senior clerk believes. But she knows several who have had no time off in two years. She herself had a vacation of only 5 days last summer.

Month of Rest Urged.

"Every woman in an exacting Government position should have at least a month off," Mrs. Perez declared yesterday.

Evidently many agree with her, because already the railroad ticket offices are doing a rushing business in answering queries about tours.

A survey of these offices showed the bulk of the travel will go Westward. According to the inquiries, Alaska is the goal of many women Government workers. Anyone of three reasons, in addition to the magnificent scenery, may explain the perference for trips to the North this year.

First, there is the well-known love interest. Alaska's numerous attractive and prosperous bachelors have received pretty enticing publicity in books and newspapers throughout the States.

Snowy Peaks Beckon.

Second, any one who has spent a summer in Washington would naturally regard snow-tipped peaks and crisp air with a good deal of respect, even affection.

Then, most potent reason of all, Alaska provides the excuse for a boat trip without going to foreign lands, where the American dollar isn't what it used to be.

Those who aren't flirting with the idea of sailing up to Alaska on a vacation are considering California, the Canadian Rockies and the National Parks.

Chicago, with its second edition of the Century of Progress, will undoubtedly draw some vacationists. But most of the women Government workers are planning to go beyond Chicago. Yellowstone Park, Estes Park and Glacier Park will get their share. So will Rocky Mountain Park.

They'll Travel—and Rest!

California is the objective of many of the potential travelers. Between gaping at movie stars and stretching necks in an effort to see tops of the big trees, the women Government employes believe they will find plenty to do in this one State.

Dude ranches offer almost as much possibility of romance as Alaska, which probably accounts for several of these rustic resorts being booked solid for the entire summer.

Not all the women who inquire at railway ticket offices about far-away places will go when the time comes. Some of them will lose a defiance expressed earlier in the season and will stick by their rainy day savings. But the majority will bravely sally forth in quest of adventure, romance and a change of scene. Oh, yes, and rest.

Read in tomorrow's Post of vacationists who follow winding roads by means of motor buses.

Dogs Guard City Plants.

Portage, Wis. (U.P.).—Three dogs are on constant guard at three of the city's strategic points. They are all owned by John Allmendinger, superintendent of the Portage water plant. "Fritz," a fox terrier, was the first to be used as a watchman. His vigil was so efficient that Allmendinger drafted "Jerry" and "Major," Boston bulls, into service. The canine watchmen patrol the water plant, sewage plant and city hall.

Fish Clog Water System.

Vancouver, B. C. (U.P.).—The prize for the best fish story of the season so far should go to Robert Reid, of Vancouver. Reid reports that on coming home from work one day he found every tap in his home blocked. An investigation, he says, revealed that the pipes were blocked by fish.

Freedom Near for Fugitive

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—James A. Larue, fugitive from a Florida chain gang, whose case attracted wide attention and resulted in a sharp exchange between Florida's Gov. Scholtz and Judge Alfred O. Erickson here, stood on the threshold of freedom tonight.

Liberty was restored to Larue, a prisoner in the jail here since last December, when the State Supreme Court at Springfield today reversed an earlier ruling by the Cook County Criminal Court, which directed that Larue be returned to Florida.

Authorities said they understood Larue would be freed upon receipt of the Supreme Court's mandate by Warden David Moneypenny, of the Cook County Jail, probably tomorrow.

Larue, 27, was seized as a robbery suspect last December, but the complainant, Mrs. Alberta Clawsen, from whose home $800 in jewelry was stolen while he was employed as a handy man there, had the charge quashed when she asserted her belief in his innocence.

Meanwhile he had been identified as a fugitive. He told Judge Erickson he had four and a half years of a five-year sentence left to serve when he escaped from the chain gang on April 15, 1933. He declared he had been convicted of burglary in Dade County, Fla., because he had entered a vacant house "just out of curiosity."

"One day a week I was put in the 'hot box,'" Larue told the jurist. "The sun blistered me by day and the swamp winds made me ache with cold at night."

"I'll give you every break in the world," Judge Erickson announced. "I know how they treat Northerners down in Florida."

Davis Retrial Plea Is Studied

Decision Due Next Week in Embezzlement Case at Rockville.

Arguments in the motion for a new trial of Bryan Davis, former town clerk and tresurer of Takoma Park, Md., who was found guilty on charges of embezzlement of town County Circuit Court at Rockville, funds by a jury in Montgomery Md., May 11, were heard yesterday by Judge Arthur D. Willard, in Rockville.

The judge indicated that he probably would announce his decision in about a week.

The defense attorneys, F. Barnard Welsh and J. Bond Smith, contended the verdict was against the evidence, against the weight of the evidence and that tSates Attorney Stedman Prescott made improper remarks to the jury. They further contended the remarks should have been stricken from the record and the jury instructed not to consider them which the judge refused to do.

They contended Prescott told the jury: "The certain surrounding circumstances of charges against a man make a prima facie case and it it incumbent upon the defendnt if that fact is brought out, to produce testimony to show you that that is wrong."

Prescott claimed the court stenographer had erred and that what he said was, as far as he could remember: "When certain surrounding corcumstances made a prima facie case it then becomes necessary for the defendant to prove that it is false."

Murderers Sought In Three Counties

Two Men and Two Women Meet Tragis Death.

Charleston, W. Va., June 19 (Spl.). State police and officers of three counties today were investigating three tragedies which resulted in the deaths of two men and women.

At Bluefield police said they could find no motive for the slaying last night of Mrs. Lucino Harrison and her mother, Mrs. Mary Ann Sizemore, presumably by Walter Cheek, an Algoma miner, who was shot and killed by Ken Harrison, husband of Mrs. Harrison. Police Chief Bassett, of North Fork, said he learned that Cheek, armed with pistol and knife, went to the Harrison home, broke open a kitchen door and fired at the woman.

Police are seeking two women and a fourth man in the killing of Manuel E. Jones, 25, who, police say, apparently was beaten with an automobile tool and placed on railroad tracks where he was found dying Sunday by a train crew. Held on murder warrants are Selie Adkins, 34, of Huntington, and Henry Mounte, 24, and Owen Slagel, 33, both of Guyandotte. A coroner's jury found that Jones was killed by unknown persons.

"Is it my imagination?" asks Bing Crosby "or are Old Golds really cooler and easier on the throat?"

Dear Mr. Crosby:—

When you changed to Old Gold cigarettes a few months ago, it was fact, not fancy, that gave your throat a thrill!

Many tests have established Old Gold's superior smoothness. A group of New York throat specialists, for instance, tested several brands and found Old Golds appreciably cooler and easier on the throat tissue.

"No artificial flavoring" . . . that's one reason. But the character of the tobacco . . . that's the BIG reason. It's picked from the heart of the stalk, where Nature grows her mildest and coolest-burning leaf.

Helen Hicks, Links Star, Turns Pro

Gives Up Game for Year to Develop Women's Angle of Sport.

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP).—Following the example of two of England's most famous women golfers, Helen Hicks, former National champion, and international player, today announced her retirement from amateur competition and the advent of her career as America's first "business woman golfer."

Like Joyce Wethered and Enid Wilson, the 23-year-old Long Island star, who won the National title in 1931, quit the ranks of the Simon Pures to take up a commercial post with a sporting goods concern, Wilson-Western Co., of Chicago, in the capacity of adviser in its women's golf department and also to act as a special representative in all links' activities.

Dabbled in Real Estate.

Her action corresponds to the move made several years ago by George Von Elm, a former National champion, who became a business man golfer after trying several other ventures which failed. Miss Hicks has dabbled in real estate.

At a luncheon given by Don Parker, President of the New York State Golf Association and Eastern representative of the Wilson-Western Co., hard-hitting Helen blasted reports that her banker-father, Jarvis Hicks, was "fabulously wealthy," and asserted her ambition to be independent.

"I'm 23 years old and it's about time I became independent," she said.

To Study Clubs.

"Naturally I'm unhappy over the fact I am giving up all competitive golf activity, but on the other hand I believe that with my experience and my knowledge of golf and the sincere cooperation I am getting, I am going to be able to do a lot of things I have wanted to do along the line of developing golf among women and girls. There is room for a greater development in women's golf now than most people imagine."

For the present her job calls for her appearance in the Chicago club-making factory of her employer where she will study and supervise the manufacture of the implements of the game. After that her program is somewhat indefinite, although tentative plans are for exhibitions and instructions.

Nats and Tribe Mark Time in Twin Bill

Stone, Manush Hit Successive Homers in Opener; Nats Blanked in 2d.

fair hit striking an umpire who is standing in front of an infielder entitled the batter to first base, did Cronin enter an official protest and the game was played out under protest, but fans had been presented with the spectacle of highly-paid umpires muffing one of the cardinal rules in the book.

Runners were on second and first at the time, and at least one would have scored. The official scorer, despite the umpire's ruling on Manush, credited the latter with a hit.

Walter Stewart celebrated his return to pitching duty for the Nats with a nine-hit performance in that first game that saw him blank the Indians for the last eight innings after Holland's lusty smash for a home run into the center field bleachers with Knickerbocker on base had given the Tribe a 2-0 lead.

Tied With Homers.

The Nats tied matters at 2-2 in a jiffy when Johnny Stone wafted a home run high over the right field wall and hardly had returned to the bench before Heinie Manush smacked the succeeding pitch for a low-slung liner that also cleared the wall for a homer.

Thereafter Stewart dealt the Indians the familiar horse collars, but the Nats were back at Hildebrand for two more in the second inning on a walk to Kuhel and singles by Schulte and Myer, and they socked him for another run in the third on consecutive singles by Manush, Cronin and Travis to assume a 5-2 lead.

It was 6-2 in the sixth when Schulte singles and Myer tripled, and thus ends the story of the first game.

The Nats left that second game on the bases while Harder was fashioning his shutout victory. Nine Washington players were left to perish on the paths as the Nats swung with nothing but futility against Harder's pitches.

Trosky Slams One.

What ultimately proved to be the winning run was scored back in the second inning by the simple expedient of a rollicking homer by big Nick Trosky over the scoreboard in right field, but just to make matters conclusive, the Indians came back for two more in the second when Knickerbocker beat out a perfect bunt to Travis, Averill walked, and Hale and Trosky scored 'em with singles.

The lower end of the Nats' batting order was of no help in the second inning, after Travis had walked. Schulte had doubled and Phillips had walked to fill the bases with none out. Very conveniently for the Tribe, Monte Weaver hit into a double play.

The Nats had runs left on base in the third and the fifth, but they had more opportunities than a Peeping Tom in a nudist colony in the sixth and seventh when Pinch-Hitters Red Kress and Dave Harris, both up with two runners on base, obliged Harder by going out very meekly.

Braves Trim Cubs, 2-1; Brandt Allows 4 Hits

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs' southpaw jinx in the form of Ed Brandt popped up again today and the Boston Braves won the final game of the series, 2 to 1. The defeat was the Cubs' seventh in their last eleven games here.

Brandt allowed only four hits, two of them by Floyd Herman, who scored the only Cub run in the seventh.

Heads to Bar Fiermonte Title Bid

Commission in New York Declares He Is Not "Good Enough."

"Plot," Cries Johnston, Defying Brown, Etal, to Check Plan.

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP).—The feud between Madison Square Garden and the New York State Athletic Commission broke out on a fresh front today as the fistic fathers ordered a stop to this business of matching Enzo Fiermonte, society's favorite, against Maxey Rosenbloom for the light-heavyweight championship.

Fiermonte, little known but handsome Italian pugilist whose marriage to the former Mrs. John Jacob Astor created a social sensation last year, had gone so far as to train one day on his wife's estate at Southampton before the commission threw the Garden into an uproar.

Contracts Not Yet Signed.

The commission today warned Sam McQuade, who holds the title of matchmaker at the Garden, that no approval will be given a Rosenbloom-Fiermonte match if and when the subject is brought officially before the commission. Since no contracts have been signed, though a tentative date of July 19 had been set for the Long Island bowl, the match has no official status.

"Fiermonte may be a champion to the former Mrs. Astor, but he is still a young man who hasn't fought around here in over two years and even then never reached the status of a main bout performer," said Bert Stand, secretary of the commission, in explaining the action.

Johnston Enraged.

"We feel that there are other and far more deserving challengers. Anyway, the commission wants to talk to Rosenbloom about his slapping style of fighting, which is contrary to our rules, before letting him fight here again."

This aroused a bellow of rage from Jimmy Johnston, manager of boxing at the Garden, whose brother, Charlie Johnston, has been handling Fiermonte's affair.

"It's all a plot to drive the Johnstons out of business," Jimmy screamed. "But they'll never do it. First Brown (Commissioner Bill Brown) tries to ruin the Baer fight, and now this.

Attacks Commission.

"Fiermonte can draw a big gate and bring society people to the ringside who never were there before. He might lick Rosenbloom, everybody else has been doing it. He's going to get his chance if it's the last thing I do in the Garden. No commission can stop me and they can't make matches for me either. They did that for the small clubs and drove them all out of business."

New York State's boxing laws give the commission absolute power over all matches, however. Without commission approval any bout is against the law and probably would be stopped by police.

Manush's Drive Hits Umpire, Is Ruled Single After Game

By Frank H. Young.

PROBABLY the most maligned of all professions is that of baseball umpire. The very nature of their duties makes them appear wrong about half the time to players and fans alike, for after all, most of their rulings are merely a matter of judgment. But, under the "Strange As It Seems" caption may be mentioned that Umpire John Donnelly yesterday completely "booted" a decision and yet it was not until after the game that the players knew it and most of the fans left Griffith Stadium unaware that everything had not been played "according to Hoyle."

In the fourth inning of the first game of the twin-bill, with two down and men on second and first, Heinie Manush, the leading hitter in the majors, rifled a drive headed past second base. The ball hit Umpire Donnelly on the foot, caromed directly to Shortstop Knickerbocker, who got the ball to first ahead of Heinie, and Donnelly ruled the batter out.

Protest is Entered.

Only Manush protested on the field, for the big boy was battling for the hit he felt he had been robbed of, but League Head Will Harridge and Umpire-in-Chief Tommy Connolly happened to be visiting at the time and sat in the stands with President Clark Griffith. They quickly saw that Donnelly had misinterpreted the baseball rules, accepted Griffith's immediate protest of the game in case the Nats were beaten and, between games, Conolly visited the umpire's room and suggested that they brush up on their baseball rules.

Under rule 47, Manush should have been credited with a hit and the ball declared "dead" as soon as it hit Donnelly. And under rule 32, Manush was entitled to first, which means that the other players should have advanced to third and second to make room for him. The first of these rulings, under "Entitled to Bases," reads:

"The base runner shall be entitled, without liability to be put out, to advance one base, except where more are specified, in the following cases: * * * if a fair hit ball strikes the person or clothing of the umpire * * * before touching a fielder." And, under this condition, it is a dead ball "in case a fair hit ball strikes a baserunner or umpire before touching a fielder."

Allowed Hit.

Under Harridge's decision, Manush was allowed the hit which the umpires took away from him. Nothing, of course, could be done with respect to the chance of making more runs which the wrong ruling took away from the Nats, but, as Cronin's team won anyway, nobody is worried much about that.

Using this occurrence as an example, President Griffith again brought up the question of keeping the umpires from standing in the infield. Harridge referred him to Connolly, who declared that the umpire can not properly call plays from back of second. "I think it is better to have an occasional ball hit an umpire than to have the many poor decisions which would result with the umpires standing a long ways off and in no position to see the plays properly," said Connolly.

Harridge and Connolly both agreed not only that Donnelly erred, but that Lou Kolls, as the game's chief umpire, also was equally to blame for not overruling Donnelly.

Mickey Cochrane and his Detroit Tigers invade Washington this afternoon, opening a five-game set, which includes a double-header Saturday. Schoolboy Rowe is expected to do the alien twirling while Manager Joe Cronin will nominate "General" Al Crowder to oppose him. This series is a "big" one for both teams, as the Tigers, in a virtual tie for first place, are only two and a half games in front of the natives.

But for a great one-hand grab by Cronin in the first inning of the opener yesterday, the Tribe would have scored at least one more run. The Nat leader came up with Knickerbocker's drive on first bounce, falling as he smothered the ball, but recovering in time enough to make a force-play at the middle sack.

Stone was all set for Hale's long fly in the fifth of the first fracas but the wind caught hold of it and carried it over his head, giving the hitter a double.

Catchers need not worry about missing pop-fouls. From the press-box on top of the roof, the official scorer can not see more than 10 feet back of the plate. So he can not call errors on the receiver. As a result, Phillips escaped being charged one in the sixth of the second game with Burnett up.

'Pie' Traynor New Pirate Manager

Succeeds George Gibson After Team Slumps From 2d Place.

New Pilot Has Been With Pittsburgh 14 Years; "Great Favorite."

PITTSBURG, June 19 (AP).—Genial Harold "Pie" Traynor, for 12 years one of baseball's greatest third basemen, today succeeded George Gibson as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, of the National League.

The change, effective at today's game with the New York Giants, was announced by President William Benswanger of the club.

Benswanger, emerging from his office after a conference with Gibson and Secretary Sam Watters, said:

"Gibson is leaving us on the most friendly terms. We both feel the change will be for the best interests of the club. The team has been going badly. Everyone knows that."

Team in Slump.

Traynor, who has been the team's captain, takes over the helm in the midst of a slump that in three weeks has seen the Pirates skid from second place into fourth in the standings, perilously close to the second division. Gibson has been pilot since 1932.

The new manager has a great following among Pirate fans. "Pie" came to the Pirates 14 years ago and two seasons later got a job as regular third baseman. He has held down the "hot corner" for the Pirates since.

He was presented to the players at the clubhouse by President Benswanger just before this afternoon's tilt with the Giants.

"I have been entrusted with this position at a very crucial time," said Traynor. "I do not underestimate the responsibility which has been transferred to me. I accept it gladly, however, when I realize there is no hard feeling between me and George Gibson, for whom I always have had great respect.

Makes No Promises.

"I will not promise anything at this time. I think we have a good team, but the pitching is weak and the team play needs improvement. I will say, however, that I am sure of full cooperation from every player on the club."

Gibson was present and told the assembled players:

"Boys, you all have been 100 per cent with me, and it breaks me up to leave you. I wish you the best of luck."

Rumors that Gibson might be deposed have been circulated for some time. The manager was booed during last Sunday's game with New York, in which the Giants turned back the home club by a 9-to-3 score.

Gibson Pirate Vet.

Gibson, who was a catcher for old Pirate teams on which Hans Wagner, Fred Clarke and Tommy Leach were stars, took over the managerial reins at the opening of the 1932 season, succeeding Jewel Ens. It is the second time Gibson has retired as the Pirate manager. He first relinquished the reins in 1922 when the team cracked wide open after setting the pennant pace up to July.

His successor of today—Pie Traynor—was playing his first year as a regular with the Pirates at that time.

Only 400 See Reds Defeat Dodgers

Babich Fails in His Debut as Brooklyn Bows in Finale, 11 to 7.

CINCINNATI, June 19 (AP).—Fewer than 400 die-hard fans turned out today to see the Reds take an 11-to-7 decision from the Brooklyn Dodgers in another free-swinging game and gain an even break in their four-game series.

Johnny Babich, recruit from the Pacific Coast, made his first start for the Dodgers. He lacked control and was nicked for seven runs before he finally was forced out in the fourth after a drive from Harlin Pool's bat struck his pitching hand. The Dodgers slammed Benny Frey hard and were just one run short of a tie after Ralph Boyle's sixth-inning homer, but Cincinnati got four more off Walter Beck in the seventh to clinch the game.

Giants Sweep Series With Pirates

Win Over Pittsburgh, 5-3, Dropping Rivals Into Fifth Place.

PITTSBURGH, June 19 (AP).—The Pirates changed managers in midseason today, but the shift from George Gibson to Pie Traynor failed to halt their losing streak, as the Giants won, 5 to 3, and swept the abbreviated three-game series.

The defeat was the eighth in their last nine games for the Buccaneers and dropped them into fifth place, a game behind the Boston Braves, who defeated Chicago.

Under the active leadership of their new pilot, the Pirates outhit the league leaders, 13-11, and finally knocked Hal Schumacher out of the box in the eighth. Brilliant fielding by the Giants rendered a lot of their blows useless and Carl Hubbell finished the game in fine style after Pittsburgh had rallied for two runs in the eighth. Two double plays aided the Giants.

No Wedding Bells—Londos Too Busy

Asbury Park, June 19 (U.P.). Jim Londos and Senorita Fifi Dolores Colinore, Baltimore foreign language teacher, are "good friends" and much too busy with their respective professions to think of marriage, Londos told the United Press today.

"Wrestling takes up too much of my time," the wrestler said. "There is no truth to my reported engagement with her. We have never thought of marriage."

Miss Faunce, Medalist, Victor

Mrs. Meckley Upset by Mrs. Pray, 3 and 2; Miss Hacker Bows.

Mrs. Beller Also Surprises Victim in Close Thriller, 1 Up.

By Dave Herman.

A WAVE of upsets struck the first round of the District women's golf championship yesterday at Columbia, drowned out the hopes of three favorites, including the 1930-31 champion, Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, and came perilously close to engulfing a number of other prominent players.

When the golfing typhoon had subsided, Mrs. Meckley, strongly favored following her wonderful showing in the medal round, found herself swept out of the title picture along with Miss Susan Hacker, long-driving Chevy Chase star, and Mrs. J. W. Beller, outstanding host club entry.

In the most startling upset of the day, Mrs. Meckley bowed to Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Manor, 3 and 2; Mrs. Ora Emge, of Beaver Dam, put out Miss Hacker, 4 and 2, and Mrs. Harry A. Knox, of Congressional, turned back Mrs. Beller, 1 up, in an exciting match.

Miss Faunce Handy Winner.

Meanwhile, the medalist, Miss Winifred Faunce, whose remarkable 82 Monday set a new District qualifying round, rolled along serenely at the expense of Mrs. Don Scott, of Indian Spring, 5 and 4.

Every battle in the first flight, with the exception of the one between Miss Faunce and Mrs. Scott, was sternly contested. Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, 4 down at the ninth, won 4 straight holes, to close out Mrs. Landra B. Platt, of Chevy Chase, on the tenth green. Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, defeated Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, of Woodmont, 1 up, after Mrs. Goldsmith staged a rousing, but futile, comeback after being 4 down and 5 to go. Starting with the fourteenth, Mrs. Goldsmith took 4 straight in par figures to even the match, only to 3-putt the home green and take 7, losing to Mrs. Walper's 6.

Mrs. Scott Has Battle.

Mrs. Jack Scott, of Congressional, Colorado State champion, had to battle for dear life before nosing out Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, 1 up, and Mrs. H. R. Quinter, of Columbia, defeated Mrs.

Justa Sunbeam Leads From Start to Finish to Win in Charles Town Feature Race

25th Winner Is Credited To Weir

Golden Vein, The Gen Team to Pay $26.10 in Daily Double.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 19.—She is listed on the Jockey Club's register as Justa Sunbeam, but as far as horse racing here in the mountains is concerned she is a running collection of horse flesh. This daughter of Tryster and Sunny Light will not win the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness or the Belmont Futurity, but for ability to collect the long end of a purse in this section she is everything the doctor ordered. At least, she was a very effective 3-year-old this afternoon.

I'm justa bit rusty on my science and have forgotten how fast a sunbeam travels these days, but the namesake of one was speedy enough to step the five furlongs over a heavy track in 1:05, which was fast enough to lead the field to the wire in the feature race. In fact, it was fast enough to top the group of six from start to finish.

Young Francis Weir, becoming the most fashionable rider at this course, did the saddle work on Justa Sunbeam and he was as effective as that Greek god so and so who used to drive the sun across the sky before racing was legalized in Greece. Weir and Justa Sunbeam evidently were of one mind—both wanted to go places in a hurry and they set the finish line as their destination.

Scores by a Length.

Like a flash of light, horse and rider popped out of the stall gate at the 5-furlong pole and for betting purposes the race was over. Justa Sunbeam stepped briskly along, apparently with no regard for the track left heavy by yesterday's rains. Dutiful and Happy Lope were closest and they remained closest for the remainder of the sprint. At the finish, it was Justa Sunbeam by a length, Dutiful by three lengths and Happy Lope by a city block. The others in the field were justa in the field.

At the pay-off window there was justa $10.40 to be had for each $2 investment.

The daily double, after reaching a new high of $404 yesterday, shrunk to reasonable proportions today. The combination was Golden Vein, in the first, and The Gen in the third and the mutuel was $26.50.

Fifth Straight Victory Is Won by Ridgeview

Washington Park, Ill., June 19 (AP). J. D. Mikel's Ridgeview, the odds-on choice, justified the faith of his backers today by racing to a fifth straight victory in the Chicago District, at Washington Park.

Nicely rated by Jockey Teddy King, Ridgeview went into the lead in the one-mile test shortly after the small field was sent away. Without any urging Ridgeview cantered the mile in 1:37, and finished a handy length and a half in front of Dust Girl from the Shandon Farm. Sir Ten saved the short end of the purse.

Coast Legion Star, 17, Leaves to Join Indians

Stockton, Calif., June 19 (AP). Myron (Mike) McCormick, 17-year-old star of the Stockton American Legion junior baseball team, today was en route East to join the Cleveland Club of the American League. He will receive a 9-day trial.

Leetown Lions Defeat Army Medical Center

Charles Town, W. Va., June 19 (Spl.).—The Leetown Lions, of Leetown, W. Va., trimmed the U. S. Army Medical Center nine, of Washington, 7 to 3, on the winners' lot before a large crowd.

Lefty Bradley was on the mound for the winners and showed fine form, allowing his opponents 8 hits and fanning 13, while his mates were collecting 11 hits off Tychinski.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TALOMOND, $12.80, $4.60, $4.00; BLACK DREAMS, $3.00, $2.80; CAPTOR, $7.40.

TALOMOND, rated off the early pace, responded well when called upon to take command, and drew out easily. BLACK DREAMS, always a forward contender, wore down CAPTOR when entering the stretch, but could not withstand the winner. CAPTOR had good early speed and held on well. SAMBO G. made up some ground. MAZYNIATA stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:59. Off at 4:59½. Winner, P. Haslup's br. g. (4), by The Wanderer—Gayety. Trained by C. Nichols. Value to winner, $200; second, $35; third, $15. Time, 0:26 1-5, 0:53, 1:21 1-5, 1:49, 1:56 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FUSCO, $10.40, $4.20, $2.40; WANDREL, $5.00, $3.40; MODERN TIMES, $2.40.

FUSCO, away forwardly, raced WANDREL into submission and, saving ground, easily drew out at the finish. WANDREL raced lapped on FUSCO until reaching the stretch, where she was unequal to the speed of the winner, while being easily best of the others. MODERN TIMES, reserved in the early stages, moved up quickly on the backstretch, but flattened out badly. VOCO tired. GLISK raced evenly. ANGRY LASS was never a factor.

Stocks Pushed Lower Under Profit-Taking

New York, June 19 (AP).—Traders turned to the selling side of stocks today after the market had shown indifference to the adjournment of Congress, ordinarily a bullish factor in Wall street.

Profit taking was general on the theory that the "good news" was out and had been discounted. A moderate decline cancelled about half the gains scored at the week-end and in the preceding session.

Metal, sugar and other groups in bullish favor lately formed the vanguard of the downturn. Aircraft shares also were weak, with selling centered upon United Aircraft. Scattered issues breasted the main current and finished higher.

Trading Was Active.

Trading was active for a time in the forenoon while selling was at its height, but slowed down later. Volume on the stock exchange increased to 851,635 shares against 605,210 yesterday.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks dropped 1.5 points to 80.9.

In contrast with stocks, other markets pursued a steady to firm course for the most part. High-grade bonds on the average moved forward to peak levels for the year.

Losses of 1 to about 4 points were recorded at the finish in United Aircraft, U. S. Smelting & Refining, American Smelting, American Beet Sugar, Cuban American Sugar preferred, Hercules Powder and Howe Sound.

Leading rails and industrials were generally fractionally to about 2 points lower, including American Can, Chrysler, General Motors, General Electric, Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Steel, Santa Fe, New York Central and Pennsylvania. Utilities sagged with the market.

Steel Strike Explanation.

In explanation of "why the widely heralded steel strike did not and will not materialize," the Iron Age presented details of a strike vote by employes of the United States Steel Corporation.

Several favorable dividend actions were outstanding in the day's routine news, including the first dividend on National Cash Register shares since October, 1931, a payment of 12½ cents. American Smelting & Refining declared a dividend of $4.50 a share on the first preferred stock on account of accummulations. The American Surety Co. declared a dividend of 50 cents, the first since September, 1931.

Weekly banking statistics showed further expansion in demand deposits and a widening of the base for potential credit expansion. However, the outstanding total of commercial loans of reporting Federal Reserve member banks continued to decline.

Packing shares held firm against the decline of the list generally, with Armour of Illinois preferred, Wilson preferred and Cudahy up fractionally to more than a point.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Decision of Business Leaders That They Must Increase Their Influence With NRA Is a Step That Demands Attention.

By Ralph West Robey.

Those who still believe, and there are many who do, that NRA is an organization which is sitting on big business in the interest of labor and consumers should study with care the reports of the meeting between business leaders and Gen. Johnson over the week-end at Hot Springs. Unfortunately the conference was not open to the press, so that the dispatches have been far from complete, but enough has been reported to show clearly what our business leaders see as the future of NRA. In a word this is that it provides a vehicle for continued Government regulation and control, but regulation and control that is directed by business itself.

It is stated, for example, that it was simply taken for granted that the NRA "idea" is necessary and that a continuation of Government interest in the organization of business is essential. The only question is how this "idea" and this "interest" can be made most effective. The decision on this, according to Mr. George H. Mead, chairman of the NRA Industrial Advisory Board, was that business must strengthen its influence in Washington. This is to be done by having a "permanent" advisory council instead of one the membership of which rotates as at present. It also was concluded, according to Mr. Mead, that this advisory council should be "made more fully representative of American business."

They See the Problem of Holding to NRA Benefits.

Now, superficially, such conclusions are not surprising. The group was composed entirely of outstanding business men who have been closely associated with NRA. They are well aware, accordingly, of the constant tug-of-war that has been going on in the determination of its policies. They have witnessed the apparent going first in one direction and then another of the NRA in its decisions on labor policies and price policies. Any they know, as well as any group could know, that as yet no broad set of principles has been developed upon which decisions may rest.

It is not unusual, therefore, that these business men should conclude that it is desirable for them to strengthen their representation before the NRA. If they do not, there will be the constant danger that other groups, labor particularly, may get the inside of the track and swing the NRA decisions in a direction that will go counter to the interest of business. In other words, as they must see it, the problem confronting them in NRA is to make sure that their influence is not permitted to lapse, that the NRA is not converted into an organization that will remove the benefits but not the burdens of the codes.

Such a Decision Goes Contrary to Public Interest.

For the rest of us, however, such a decision on the part of the business leaders, while understandable, is not wholly to the good. Approached from the point of view either of the laborer or the consumer, it means, granting the plan of increasing the influence of business is successful, that a powerful Government organization is in a position to follow policies contrary to his best interest. For once the codes are turned over to business alone, the rest of the country will be fighting against heavy odds.

If this appears far fetched, carry the line of development just one step farther and assume that strikes are prohibited. Under that condition the rest of us have no fighting weapon left. This does not mean, of course, that I like strikes or think that they are desirable. What it does mean is that if the business interests of the country gain control, or dominate the policies, of an organization such as the NRA, the right of labor to strike is virtually the only thing left between us and an economic organization that must be classed under the general term of fascism.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 86.6 Level

New York, June 19 (AP).—Various prime investment loans, with small gains, equaled or bettered their year's highs in today's bond market, but mild price irregularities ruled in the secondary groups.

The trading volume expanded to $11,332,000, par value, from $9,064,000 yesterday, and the Standard Statistic Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans was unchanged at 86.8.

Market influences, as a whole, were rather neutral, although some profit taking in the lower-priced issues apparently was prompted by the reaction in stocks.

Congress Adjournment Ignored.

Overnight news of the adjournment of Congress was without any particular effect. Idle funds continued to seek employment in the highest grade loans.

New tops for the year were recorded by some bonds of California Packing, C. I. St. Louis & Chicago, Cleveland Union Terminal, Santa Fe, Consolidated Gas, El Paso & Southwestern, Ontario Power, Pennsylvania, Shell Pipe Line, Phillips Petroleum, Revere Copper & Brass and others. Several of these ended slightly under their best prices for the session.

Other firm spots included some issues of American Telephone, Colorado & Southern, Columbia Gas, Cuba Railroad, Great Northern, Interborough Rapid Transit, Laclede Gas, Louisville & Nashville, National Dairy, Northern Pacific, Texas & Pacific and Union Pacific.

Among moderate losers were loans of Standard Oils of New York and New Jersey, Postal Telegraph, International Telephone, Nickel Plate, N. Y. Central, Erie, Denver Rio Grande, Chicago & North Western, St. Paul, Chesapeake Corp., American Water Works and Alleghany Corporation.

U. S. Government securties churned about in a relatively small fractional range, although the turnover here was stepped up to some $2,300,000 and minor declines were in the majority.

In the foreign section German Government International 5½s and 7s lost 1 and 2⅛ points, respectively, and other Reich obligations were off 1 to 3 or more. The Argentines were firm, as were loans of France, Japan and Great Britain. Some of the Cubans were heavy.

Curb's Prices Drift Lower In Dull Session

Scattered Gains Recorded in Leaders; Sales Cut to 168,000 Shares.

New York, June 19 (AP).—Curb stocks drifted slowly lower today in listless trading. With the exception of scattered gains in the oils and utilities and a few other issues, moderate losses were general.

Activity was a shade less than yesterday, with transfers totaling about 168,000 shares, compared with 172,000 on Monday.

Aluminum Co. of America, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore and Gulf Oil, with losses of 2 points and more, were outstanding weak spots.

Price Gains of Farm Products Outweigh Losses During June

(U. S. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Economics.)

Gains somewhat outweighed the losses in the markets for leading farm products around the middle of June. Weather still played a leading part. Slightly better conditions in the eastern cotton region caused the spot markets to weaken a little. Wheat sold moderately below recent top levels, because of better prospects for the spring crop. Corn and oats and most of the millfeeds advanced on indications of increased demand for stock feeding.

Live stock markets strengthened greatly after the let-up in forced shipments resulting from drought conditions. Hides have been tending downward owing to recent large supply. Wool markets are fairly steady.

Sugar beet growers were interested in the sharp advances in the market for raw sugar. Butter and cheese averaged a little higher than in early June, the underlying market conditions lending good support. Eggs and young chickens tended to slightly lower prices. Fruits sold at firm price levels. Course of the vegetable market included about as many losses as gains, but onions tended upward while potatoes reached new low levels in some markets and prices of miscellaneous truck products shifted mainly according to changes in rate of supply from producing sections.

Cash Wheat Lower.

Domestic cash wheat markets turned weaker in mid-June with increased offerings of new crop grain from the Southwest. The harvest is unusually early as a result of heat and dryness. Marketings increased sharply in Oklahoma and Texas. Sales of new wheat at Kansas City were generally at the same price as old wheat of similar quality. Prices were about 5 cents per bushel below the recent top. Spring wheat markets turned weaker but declines in cash grain were less than for winter wheat. Marketings were relatively light.

Rye markets were independently firm, reflecting diminishing supplies of old grain and the unfavorable prospects for the new crop here and in other countries. From present indications the 1934 world rye crop will be well below that of last season. Corn markets were slightly higher, despite weakness in the wheat market. Continued crop uncertainty together with the light offerings of cash grain was a strengthening market influence.

Receipts at the principal terminals remained relatively light. Oats markets strengthened with corn but were influenced also by light receipts and the prospective short crop. Barley markets held firm and offerings of malting barley were below current trade needs.

Most Feeds Sell Higher.

Feed markets continued to strengthen around the middle of June. Increased demand from drought areas was the principal influence. Wheat feeds advanced sharply, particularly for nearby shipments, while high protein feeds gained moderately with offerings light.

Corn feeds turned weaker as the result of a slackening demand following recent price advances. Other feeds were mostly steady with a fairly active demand, largely for immediate shipments. Lack of funds in purchasers' hands and relatively low returns from feeding operations restricted purchases and tended to offset the strengthening effect of the unusually short supplies of hay and pasturage.

Dairy Position Sound.

The butter markets still show an irregular and unsettled price trend with only small price changes, close to the 25-cent level. Market improvement in production and feed conditions, over most of the important butter-producing areas brough about by fairly substantial rains since June 1, together with general reports of unsatisfactory consumption, were the principal unsettling factors.

Receipts of the four larger markets apparently reached the peak for the season during early June which was a week earlier than the height of supply the first half of June a year ago.

Prices of cheese advanced slightly in some markets. Demand for the fresh make has been fairly active, including a few sales for future delivery. The principal unsettling market feature is the large stocks of cheese in storage, the 57,793,000 pounds reported on June 1 being about 16,000,000 greater than the stocks on June 1 last year and 11,000,000 pounds in excess of the 5-year June 1 average.

Wheat's Rally Regains Loss In Early Sales

Market Closes 1/4 Cent Up, With Corn and Oats Irregular.

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—A brisk rally in the wheat market late today accompanied a buying spurt on the part of houses with connections East, and more than overcame earlier losses.

High temperatures in spring wheat territory and unfavorable crop reports from there were mentioned as among incentives for purchasing. A Chicago observer wired that from Portal, N. Dak., to Weyburn, 90 miles, crops were a complete failure and would not return seed.

Earlier, the wheat market had sagged owing more or less to improved threshing returns from winter wheat sections Southwest, Kansas in particular.

Wheat closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to 1/4 higher, corn, 1/4 off to 1/8 up; oats, at 1/8 decline to 1/4 advance, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents lower.

Adjournment of Congress without taking action toward enactment of proposed measures for further regulating commodity exchange transactions was generally looked upon by traders as having had a steadying influence on grain values.

On the other hand, profit taking for recent buyers of corn had an evident bearish effect at times both as to wheat and other grains. Contributing somewhat to transient setbacks in the wheat market was notice taken that the latest Government forecast of 1934 Kansas wheat production, 80,436,000 bushels, exceeded to a material extent Kansas County figures totaling only 74,223,000. And it was inferred that the Federal Crop Reporting Board at Washington had revised upward the State statistician's figures.

Predictions of widespread showers and cooler temperatures in spring wheat territory tonight and tomorrow served during much of the day as a handicap to friends of higher prices.

Reports of European rains furnishing some relief from drought were also noted. A rather pronounced disposition, too, was shown by many traders to stand aside for the present and await new developments before taking an aggressive stand on either side of the market.

Continuance of chinch-bug damage, together with reports that infestation was spreading, strengthened the corn market early, but price advances led to profit taking. Adverse crop reports as to oats were the rule.

Cuban Exports Of Sugar Cut 232,141 Tons

449,689 Units Shipped to U. S.; Puerto Rico, 498,79[illegible]

New York, June 19—Cuban exports of sugar since the beginning of the year to June 16, totaled 717,854 long tons raw sugar value as compared with 949,995 long tons during the similar period last year, a decrease of 232,141 tons, or 24.4 per cent, according to advices received by Lamborn & Co.

To the United States there were shipped 449,689 tons, as against 680,245 tons for the same period in 1933, a decrease of 210,556 tons, or approximately 32 per cent.

The shipments to June 16, this year, approximate 26.5 per cent of the quota allocated to Cuba by the United States Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

To Other Markets.

To other destinations, principally United Kingdom, France, and Canada, the exports amounted to 268,165 tons, as contrasted with 289,750 tons shipped during the same period last year, a decrease of 21,585 tons, or approximately 7.4 per cent.

Sugar stocks in Cuba on June 16 approximated 2,463,000 tons, while on the same date last year 2,637,000 tons were on hand.

Raw sugar shipments from Puerto Rico to the United States from January 1 to June 16 totaled 498,798 short tons, an increase of 6.6 per cent, when compared with shipments of 467,685 during a similar period of last year, according to cables to the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange.

Shipments of Refined.

Refined shipments amounted to 70,510, a 30.6 per cent increase over the 53,977 ton total for the 1933 period.

Shipments of raw and refined together for the week ended June 16 amounted to 30,485 tons, against 16,173 in the same week last year. About 71.3 per cent of the quota for the United States, under the Costigan-Jones sugar bill, has been shipped to date.

The balance for shipment to complete the quota figures is approximately 230,000 tons, some of which has already been sold. The carryover into 1935, it is estimated, will be slightly in excess of 100,000 short tons.

The Post Sandlotter

THE fate of the Miller Furniture Team in its stretch drive for Section B honors in the National Capitol League rests on the outcome of its clash today with the ever-threatening Union Printers. Millers are tied for first place with Griffith's Blue Coals and Dor-A nines, which are top-heavy favorites to win over Rinaldi Coalmen and Warwicks, respectively. Unless the unexpected should happen to both, Hienie Webb's Printers haven't a chance for first-round honors, but they can eliminate the Furniture club. In this event, the Blue Coals and Dor-A, if victorious in Sunday's games, would meet for section leadership.

The consistently fine pitching of Harry Milburn and Joe Porter during the past several weeks makes the Millers a slight favorite over the Printers. Ross Jewelers and Captial Heights, pace setters in the District Independent League, face stiff competition in their Sunday battles with the Kenilworth and rejuvenated Grace A. C.

Important Store Game.

First-half championship in the Departmental Store Loop will be at stake in the Sabbath attraction between Hecht's and Palais. Hecht's virtually had first-half honors in its grasp only to have it rudely snatched away again by losing a double-header to Kann's last Sunday. Paul Messink and Bo Wallach are expected to be the rival pitchers in the ititlar game.

Another hot battle is promised when Benning A. C. challenges the first-place right of Mount Rainier A. C., present leader in the Prince Georges County League. These rivals clash on the Mount Rainier diamond.

Miller Furniture will meet the strong North Washington nine Saturday at 3 o'clock at Four Corners.

Congress Heights faces Fort Myer A. C. this afternoon on the Heights field. Plenty of practice will be the policy of the Heights Team under its new management, and a week-day schedule is being made. For games call Lincoln 3895.

Washington All-State Stars are seeking games with unlimited teams. Call District 1525, Extension 32, between 6 and 7 p. m.

Washington A. C. is desirous of completing its schedule. Phone Georgia 4716 for games.

The pennant march of Army War College in the Army-Navy-Marine League was brought to a sudden halt last week-end, when both Bolling Field and the Navy team upset the leaders in a pair of stunning reverses. These results created a triple tie in the league for first place among War College, Navy and Fort Washington. Standing of the teams follows:

Fish Like Beefsteak.

Fish in a private preserve known as Roehms Lake, near Nashville, Tenn., bite best when raw beefsteak is used for bait.

Mala, the Eskimo Actor, Teaches Hollywood a New Fad; Irvin S. Cobb Bewildered by Many "Ranches;" Miss Kingsley Strolls the Boulevard.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, June 19.—Hollywood has drained the water from its swimming pools, folded up its lawn-umbrellas, shaken the dust of Beverly Hills from its heels, and now is actively engaged in learning the fine points of how to use a pah-doo-ti, which in English is a double blade paddle used to propel an Eskimo kaiak.

SHARON LYNNE.

This latest of outdoor fads has smitten the film colony hard and all up and down famed Malibu Beach members of Hollywood's screen families are seen paddling their frail little hair-sealskin boats into the surf.

Mala, Eskimo actor in the film "Eskimo," introduced the sport, and Edmund Lowe, Wesley and Charlie Ruggles, Sharon Lynne, Arline Judge, Robert Montgomery, Nils Asther and other Malibu dwellers have taken it up.

Irvin Cobb Bewildered.

"One thing I can't get used to out here," Irvin Cobb remarked to Will Rogers, while visiting on the "Judge Priest" set at the Fox studio, "is the number of ranches. "Everything's a ranch; not only cattle ranches, but peach ranches, bee ranches, spinach ranches. I even saw a 'pet birds ranch' out in the suburbs t'other day. I expect any day when I drive in the country to see a sign, 'Teddy Bear Ranch.'"

Pertinent and Impertinent.

Glen Boles,, under contract to Warner Brothers, was born in Hollywood and will journey out of California for the first time in his life when he leaves this week for West Point, where he will spend three weeks working in "Flirtation Walk." He has asked for a day extra in addition to "see New York!"

Irked By Inquisitors.

Writer Charles Vidor has been pestered so much by the inquisitive, he is saving wear and tear on his vocal chords by having a large sign printed, which he displays over his desk. It reads: "I am not related to King Vidor."

Heard on the Boulevard.

Helen Flint, hostess at a party at her home Thursday night in honor of the cast of "Ah, Wilderness," now playing at the El Capitan. Among those attending were seen Will Rogers, featured in the play; William Janney, Charlotte Henry, Martha Mayo, Ralph Remley, Jay Ward, Anne Shoemaker, Mary Blackford, Lex Lindsay, Anne O'Neal, John Dilson, James Macklin, Clyde Dilson, also Anita Louise, Tom Brown, Willard Brown, George Baxter, Katherine Alexander, Ruth Roland, Reginald Sharland (you hear him over the radio each night as the Honorable Archie), Minna Gombel, Charles Beyer, Charles MacArthur . . . Heather Angel is the last person in the world you would suspect of playing polo. But she does, and a very good game, too, says that authority, "Big Boy" Williams . . . George O'Brien dining at Levy's with his mother and brother, celebrating a month-old "anniversary" of the George O'Brien heir.

When Alan Dinehart was asked on who he bet in the Baer-Carnera fight, he answered: "On Carnera. June Knight told me to."

Jean Harlow was called upon to administer a smart slap to Lional Barrymore in a recent M.-G.-M. picture. She "pulled" the blow. "Aw," remarked Barrymore, "slap me hard—that wouldn't hurt a flea." "But I didnt want it to," protested Jean. Barrymore ist ill wondering if it had the earmarks of a dirty crack.

BootlegBlamed On Corn Sugar

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—A check on the sale of corn sugar in order to curb the manufacture of bootleg liquor was demanded today by Edward P. Mulrooney, chairman of the alcoholic beverage control commission of New York, at the closing session of the National Liquor Conference.

Little illicit liquor is being distilled from grain, Mulrooney told delegates from 23 States. The obvious reason, he said, was that corn sugar, or molasses, in distillation, leaves no residue or odor.

"The total corn sugar production in the United States jumped from 174,368,818 gallons in 1914 to 904,830,682 in 1927," he said. "In 1931 it was 802,003,699, with only a slight decrease in 1932."

Mulrooney said that during those years there was only a moderate increase in the manufacture of the legitimate products of corn sugar.

Dr. J. M. Doran, Federal administrator of industrial alcohol, said in an interview that the bootlegger was to blame for the disappointing Federal revenue. The revenue from December 5 to May 1 was about $50,000,000, or half the amount predicted.

The conference adopted a resolution asking substantial reduction in Federal liquor taxes as a means of fighting bootleggers. A second resolution asked President Roosevelt to "exercise the powers vested in him under the reciprocal tariff act by lowering duties on imported wines and liquors, at least to supply present demand."

Klein Under Handicap.

Chuck Klein, star outfielder of the Chicago Cubs, has been suffering from badly bruised hands for some time. The plucky home run hitter had kept the matter a secret for many days, but it finally came out when Chuck did not catch fly balls with his usual sureness. The soreness in his palms, due to what is commonly known as stonebruise, also bothered him in gripping the bat.

Urbanski Hitting Well.

When Bill Urbanski, shortstop of the Boston Braves, awoke the morning of June 4, which was his thirtieth anniversary, he found himself in possession of a batting mark of .360, the highest on his club. Urbanski, Jurges of the Cubs and Vaughan of the Pirates are understood to be the only contenders for the position of shortstop on the senior major's All-Star team at New York on July 10.

JOIN AN EXPEDITION

Extensive plans are now being arranged for conducting a high-grade expedition into Yucatan, Central America, Java and India, in a well-considered effort to solve the mystery of the lost Mayan civilization and write its history—the history of the Americas before Columbus came. Different from other expeditions, investments in the enterprise will be secured and repaid with profits. You can join this expedition by becoming a part of it, by taking an interest in its associated publishing syndicate, in which there will be a few openings for activity. The publishing syndicate is being formed as the base for a large general publishing company with headquarters in Washington. It is the most important factor of the expedition. Only financially responsible replies are sought. Take an interest in this sound and unusual enterprise and help to win fame and give America its history before A. D. 1492. For full particulars apply to THE CAPITAL PUBLISHING SYNDICATE, 948 Shoreham Building, Washington, D. C.

IF YOU have $100 or more to invest write Box 88, Washington Post.

Walt Mason, Himself

End of the World.

Say scientific seers, grave, learned and solemn chaps, "In just ten million years this planet will collapse. The sun will cease to shine, and everything will freeze; we have it figured fine, we're not dispensing cheese." There'll be no light or heat, the stars will cease to shine, we'll have no safe retreat, we'll have no tree and vine. Distraught in heart and soul, in darkness we will wend, and try to borrow coal that no one has to lend. No waves will beat the cliff, the waves will icebergs be, our whiskers frozen stiff, we'll be a sight to see. Thus plunged in deepest night we'll go with feeble tread, and then give up the fight and die until we're dead. It is a solemn thought, this world must fade and pass; but then we have been taught that flesh is merely grass. And so I do not fret o'er this prediction queer; for science may be wet, and buffaloed the seer. No doubt some men feel sore when hearing news like this, and they will walk the floor and howl and hoot and hiss. But I won't gain a crease upon my furrowed brow because all things shall cease ten million years from now.
